Call By Number Campaign

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., has started a campaign to have subscribers call by number instead of by name. Efforts along this line have been made by the local telephone people for some time, but these efforts have not always met with the success they deserved, owing to the fact that the subscribers did not understand the reason for it.

The local manager at Chestertown, R. C. Harris stated today that subscribers are asked to call by number for the sake of the service and for the sake of the operators, and that it is the standard telephone practice, even in towns smaller than Chestertown.

He explained that there are several hundred—often several thousand—telephone lines coming into a central office. On each line there is at least one subscriber. The line numbers of these subscribers are marked on the switchboard, and that is the only way an operator has to know a subscriber.

When subscribers insist on calling by name, they are forcing the girl at the switchboard to memorize several hundred names and numbers, or to look up the numbers in the telephone book before she makes the connections. This interferes to some extend with the speed and accuracy of the service, as there are usually several calls coming in at a time.

Suppose an operator should succeed in memorizing all the names and numbers of subscribers, she cannot remain at the switchboard all the time. Sundays come around and Christmas, and Fourth of July. She must have a day off once in a whil , and sometimes it is necessary for her to remain at home on account of sickness. It may be possible that several girls of the regular force must be absent at the same time.

At these times other operators, perhaps from another town or from Baltimore, must be called in to take their places. These new girls are expert operators, but they cannot be expected to be familiar with subscribers' names that they have never heard. They are perfectly familiar with the switchboard, however, as they always make telephone connections by number.

Therefore, if the citizens of a town persist in calling by name, it simply means that they are keeping the telephone girls from getting a holiday.

The local manager states that many subscribers are now calling by number, and for these he has only praise, but there are still a suffiicent number calling by name to cause serious interference with the service.
