THERE have been over 5,000 converts at the Billy Sunday meetings in Baltimore and crowds are attending the meetings daily.

ONE of Kent's best citizens and progressive farmers says there are there things the people are going to have and right shortly, viz., Good Roads, Prohibition and Woman Suffrage.

UNLESS the main street of Chestertown is covered with an oil dressing the elegant road which has been built at considerable cost will soon go to pieces. "A stitch in time saves nine," and if there is a lack of funds the Commissioners have authority to raise more.

MARYLAND DAY

The public schools of Kent will observe Maryland Day Friday, March 24. There are many noted events in Maryland worthy the study of all, but what Kent county scholars should first know are some of the historical events which occurred at our very doors. New England's pre-eminence is not due to any extraordinary pre-eminence on the part of New England's Revolutionary heroes or achievements. It is the result of enterprise and persistency in having ...dren taught what New England did ... yet, our own land is rich in men of ...e mold and of heroic performances. ...e brigantine Geddes arrived at ...tertown in 1774 with a small lot of ...ble tea for some of our neighbor- ...counties. The inhabitants assem- ...in town meeting May 13, and held ...gnation meetings and threw the tea overboard. This same day the tea was thrown overboard in Boston harbor. The latter incident is in all histories while the former is not even taught in Kent's schools. In June and July Chestertown received a letter from Boston ...king citizens for benevolence to- ...ds the poor of the metropolis. It ...as as if this town was the only place ...Maryland that sent subscriptions to Boston and Charlestown, Mass. They sent several vessells loaded with provisions.

Private capital, aided by the Government of Maryland, conductde a large armory here during the Revolutionary war, and an old cannon has been preserved to this day as one of its relics. It now adorns the lawn in front of Mr. Hope H. Barroll's residence, near town.

Kent grew out of a settlement founded as early as 1630 and it was the only other county besides St. Mary's at the first parliamenty in April, 1649. Kent was then a part of the "Isle of Kent," represented by Capt. Nicholas Martin who was paid 26 pounds of tabacco daily ($1.56.)

Chestertown was laid out by an Act of Maryland passed in 1706 and named "New Town." Its charter was revised in 1780 and the name Chester Town ...iven.

In 1755 war was declared against the French and their Indian allies, and Gov. Sharpe called for volunteers. The Gazette of Feb. 6, 1755, says: "At Chestertown several men enlisted before the drum was beat, and the officer, who wanted but 30 men, got his complement and marched with them.

In Sept., 1756, a number of gentlemen of Chestertown fitted out a fine new ship called the "Sharpe" and commanded by Capt. Edw Scott. It carried 200 men, 26 carriage guns and 20 swivels. This boat did valiant service against the French.

In George Washington's diary for August, September and October, 1774, we glean the following interesting facts: "On September 1st I breakfasted at Queen Anne's, in Prince George's county dined in Annapolis and lodged in Rock Hall, and remained there until September 2d, in order to await the arrival of my horses." Rock Hall was then the upper or northern terminus of the Annapolis Packet Ferry, where a good hotel was kept. From Rock Hall there was a well traveled road through Chestertown, by the Head of Sassafras to New Castle, Del. The Rock Hall farm, in 1774, was owned by Richard Spencer, who was a grandson of James Spencer, of Spencer Hall, on Eastern Neck Island. A part of Rock Hall was sold to James Ringgold, of Hunting...ld, in 1779, and the Rock Hall Ferry was maintained up to about 1846, the old wharves being still visible." Washington arrived at Chestertown, or New Town on the Chester, late in the afternoon of September 2, 1774, and stopped at the tavern located on the corner of Cannon and Princess streets. Not only did Washington stop here, but all the delegates who went to the Continental Congress in Philadelphia in 1774 did so. On his return, in October, he is said to have stopped at the hotel kept in the building now occupied and owned by Mr. Thomas W. Eliason, on High street. The whole cost for traveling expenses was £10, and for incidentials etc., the total amount was £251.

In 1826 this Eliason building was occupied by William Simms, who kept the hotel.

The most memorable battle on Kent soil was known as "The Battle of Caulk's Field" which occurred in the early morning hours of August 31, 1814. Of the land battles of the war with Great Britain 1812-1814, this one was of signal importance upon the result of the Battle of North Point, and the defense of the City of Baltimore, Sept. 12, 1814. The war had been in progress nearly 2 years and neither country had been able to force its conclusions. The description ... this battle with the list of officers ...d men is a most interesting study for ...ur school children and is recommended ...s one of the "studies" at this time. Previous to this battle the British had burned Havre de Grace and Frenchtown at head of Bay. They then went into the Sassafras River and burned both Georgetown and Fredericktown—incidentally bringing to light the heroism ...itty Knight.

If Villa is caught well and good. If he is not caught, shame on his pursuers. There is one lesson which has been learned and that is, the importance of preparedness. We have been a whole week getting ready to pursue a fleeing enemy. Why, Villa might have killed all our border inhabitants while we were getting ready to defend ourselves. The delay in setting the military forces into motion is a humiliating commentary upon the present state of unpreparedness in which the country finds itself. If it requires so many hours for the formation of an expedition adequate to deal the Villa forces, what would happen if the country were menaced with a more powerful antagonist?.

The army along the Rio Grande is shown to have been capable of meeting the situation created by Villa's sudden raid, although it had been known for that he contemplated a diversion to provoke intervention. If the shameful state of unpreparedness of the army to meet a known menace shall fail to arouse Congress to the gravity of the situation and spur it to immediate action looking to adequated preparedness, the country will be disgraced in the eyes of the world and we will invite aggression and insult.

ANNAPOLIS NEWS

Delegate Urie has introduced a bill to permit the use of patent oyster tongs in Kent county waters during the months of December, January, February, March and up to April 25th.

Wednesday afternoon Senator Legg, in the Senate, and Delegate Stevens, in the House, simultaneously introduced bills authorizing the State Roads Commission to build a permanent road from Ingleside, Queen Anne's county, to Massey, Kent county. The bill was referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

The State administration has changed its plans for the reorganization of the States Road Commission. Originally it proposed a commission of three members, the chairman to receive a salary of $2,500, and his associates salaries or personal expense allowances of $500 each. Now it still proposes to pay the chairman $2,500, but proposes to allow his two associates $2,000 a year each. The measure was adopted by the Senate and passed on to its third reading, and the assumption is that it will pass the Senate and go over to the House as it now stands.

Senator Ogden introduced a bill making it a misdemeanor for any adult person of sufficient financial ability to neglect or refuse to support his or her destitute parent or parents. The penalty attached to the bill is a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment in the Correction for not more than one year or both. The court may direct the payment of the fine in whole or in part to the parent or parents of the guilty person, or it may, instead of imposing the penalty, direct the payment by the defendant of a certain sum weekly for the space of two years to his or her parent or parents.

The tax exemption of $500 on household furniture and effects will remain as it is so far as the State taxes and Baltimore city taxes are concerned. The Tydings bill, which aimed to reduce the exemption to $100, was defeated in the House, but a substitute was passed to its third reading, which would give the county commissioners of any county the right to assess on household furniture and effects above the value of $100, such taxes to be for county or local purposes only.

A group of tax measures have passed to the third reading in the Senate and go to the House for consideration. These bills come from the State Tax Commission. Briefly, the bills provide as follows: No. 368—Empowering the Tax Commission to assess all property in the State. This bill relates to county assessors under the Tax commission, gives the assessors additional powers and authorizes the commission to appoint additional county assessors at pay not to exceed $5 per day. These latter assessors are to be used for extra work, and they assume duties for which the county commissioners were formerly responsible. No. 371 makes the State Tax Commission the authority to assess property of corporations, taking such authority away from the several boards of county commissioners.

After a fight in the House the bill to create the State Board of Agriculture was passed to the third reading. It did not get through, however, without being amended. Mr. Lee, of Baltimore city, offered an amendment providing that nine members of the board be confirmed by the Senate, and made a strong speech against taking from the legislature the confirming power. The amendment carried.

LEE GETS IN THE RACE

United States Senator Blair Lee's certificate of candidacy for renomination in the Democratic primary was filed Thursday with Secretary of State Thomas W. Simmons by the Senator's son, Brooke Lee. Mr. Lee deposited $270, the amount required of candidates for nomination for the Senate.

He said that his father would make no statement at this time regarding his candidacy, but that he would go out before the Democratic voters very shortly and make a thorough campaign in all the counties and in Baltimore city.

It is believed that Senator Lee's entrance into the fight for the Democratic nomination closes the lists in that party. Congressman David J. Lewis and William Cabell Bruce announced their candidacies a good while ago. So far as known, no one else is thinking of be coming a candidate. The lists will close April 1, two weeks from Saturday. Under the Primary Election law, all candidates for nomination for Senator must file not later than 30 days before the primary. The primary this year will be held on the first Monday in May, which is May 1. In Presidential years, the primary is held in May instead of in September.
