IT COMPELS THE ADMIRATION OF ALL

THE JAMES OLIVER No. 11 SULKY PLOW

By reason of its simple construction, light weight, easy draft, durability, and perfect work is

THE BEST PLOW YOU CAN BUY

SOME OF THE REASONS

The only sulky plow made with which you can turn either gee or haw equally well, leaving no hard spots, and avoid the necessity of plowing out corners.

It is the lightest draft riding plow made, due to the entire absence of landside friction and the even distribution of the load. The weight of the plow and driver is CARRIED instead of being DRAGGED along.

One share on the No. 11 will outlast four walking plow shares. It holds to the ground at all times, especially in dry weather. May be used with or without tongue. The turning and scouring qualities of the OLIVER PLOW BASES are unequalled.

Right after harvest you will be ready for your plow again. We have sold over 150 of No. 11 Oliver Sulky Plows within the last twelve months and will have what you may need for this Fall. Expecting another carload any day now

INEXCUSABLE BLINDNESS

MESSRS. EDITORS:

A recent visit by the writer in Kent county awakened surprise, pity and protest at the general blindness of resident farmers to their own interests. On one farm a score or more of hogs having died of cholera, had been buried by a shiftless fellow in a shallow trench, within a few feet of the permanent pens where they had died. He did not care for he would soon move on. Of course he disregarded the law in so doing, as well as the rights of his neighbors. But little matter, the law would not be enforced. Even so, he was a tool of the cheap politicians ruling the county, who would protect him. His successor came bringing his fine bunch of brood sows and shotes. Unsuspecting, the pigs went into the germ laden pens, and next into the yards where the dead hogs had been buried, and subsequently soon dug up by hordes of dogs, parts of the carcasses being carried away, or the germs on their feet widely distributed over the farms wherever they chose to roam. It is needless to say the new farmer's bunch of fine hogs soon fell victims to the dread contagion and were carted to a remote place on the farm and buried, soon in turn to be similarly dug up by more dogs of the same description, ill-fed, worthless curs, and other farms to receive a baptism of the contagion as before.

A valuable flock of sheep a short time before had been ruined on these same farms by the untaxed curs, and finally the owner driven out of the sheep business at much sacrifice through disgust. I said to myself, "How long must this splendid, fertile territory remain thus cursed." An attempt to go to the root of the matter by inquiry elicited the information that cheap politics controlled the situation. A sensible dog law, also one requiring the burning of diseased hogs, are confessed to be needed, and enforced, if secured. But the cheap politician's capital is the votes of the owners of the dogs and others, and votes win.

Probably the same cheap politics account for the excessive tax rate and the antiquated methods as to road construction and maintenance, if I may judge by the road conditions usually prevailing in proximity to the writer's property. However, I hail with much satisfaction and appreciation the coming of the County Agent and teacher in agriculture. It is to be hoped that both he and the newly appointed engineer of roads may be independent of party politics. I am in the county to stay, and long to make any criticism of past error constructive to a greater Kent county and a yet more attractive field for advanced agriculture.

C. B. FISHER.

MEDFORD WILLIAMS, a farmer near Federalsburg, had a thrilling experience with an infuriated bull Wednesday. Mr. Williams ran his automobile into a field to see the bull, which he contemplated buying. The bull glanced at the car, took a second look, decided the invader was "deliberately unfriendly" and made a dash for it. Mr. Williams quickly turned on all power and the automobile shot away at 40-mile-an-hour clip, but when it reached the gate leading out of the field, Mr. Williams could not make the turn at such high speed. The bull chased him around the field several times and made desperate attempts to head off the car, but Mr. Williams by careful driving managed to win to safety from each threatened trap. The bull finally tired and gave the frightened man a chance to escape through the gate.
