Cadillac

Standard of the World

WHAT an air of utility there is about a Cadillac!

The graceful lines of the Cadillac bodies make one feel that there is surely something un-ordinary about the whole car.

No effort has been made to depart from the best accepted standards of body design. And yet instinctively you are impressed with the thought that the Cadillac is not built to meet any "accepted standards."

The outward grace of body is merely an indication of the roominess within. The fact that the eight-cylinder engine makes possible such a short hood is significant. In the ordinary six- or twelve-cylinder car the cowl and steering column must be set fully twelve or fifteen inches farther back than in the Cadillac. This means that twelve or fifteen inches of valuable space has been sacrificed within the car itself Here is just one reason why the Cadillac is so unusually comfortable.

Through the complete line of eleven different bodies—from the two and the four-passenger roadsters up to the finest Imperial limousine—the beauty of design and perfection of appointment are the result of an earnest desire to give the maximum comfort and utility

This, coupled with the remarkable eight-cylinder V-type power-plant, has made the Cadillac in truth the very Standard of the World.

Drop in our showroom or phone today for more information about the three new Cadillac body types.
