Tired

"I was weak and run-down," relates Mrs. Eula Burnett, of Dalton, Ga. "I was thin and just felt tired, all the time.
I didn't rest well. I wasn't ever hungry. I knew, by this, I needed a tonic, and as there is none better than—

CARDUI
The Woman's Tonic

"I began using Cardui," continues Mrs. Burnett.
"After my first bottle, I slept better and ate better. I took four bottles. Now I'm well, feel just fine, eat and sleep, my skin is clear and I have gained and sure I feel that Cardui is the best tonic ever made."

Thousands of other women have found Cardui just as Mrs. Burnett did. It should help you.

At all druggists.

and it ought to be in every musical two manual reel organ, built on the exact principles and measure-in the studios of such organists as Gibson, Dethlefsen, and others—such an instrument closely approximates a pipe organ and has everywhere given great satisfaction. It can be

Children Cry for Fletcher's
CASTORIA

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

PROPERTY BURNED IS PROPERTY LOST

Fire Insurance Replaces, But The Money Paid By Insurance Companies Is Not "Created."

Property burned is property lost, according to the Maryland Fire Prevention Campaign workers, whose slogan during the ten days beginning October 1 will be, "Stop a Fire Before It Starts!" During the campaign every citizen of Maryland is to be asked to do all he can to prevent fires in private homes, farm buildings and manufacturing plants, by using care and commonsense. Says Ira G. Hoagland, nationally known as a fire prevention engineer:

Fire is both a boon and a bane.
Uncontrolled, it blights, burns, consumes, destroys, devastates, wrecks havoc, incinerates, kills and maims, and generally lays waste to the creations of nature and man.

The destructiveness of fire, the economic devastation of it, is generally thought of in terms of the material damage wrought, the value of buildings burned, contents consumed, property destroyed.

It is fondly imagined, for the most part, that the insurance companies lose by fire on the buildings of commerce and industry and their contents of merchandise and materials, "raw, wrought and in process of manufacture," will be full and complete recompense for loss by fire.

A fire won't cost me a cent. The insurance companies will suffer, not me!" is the familiar chatter of honest but unthinking men—who are not considering the unmentionable kind that make money out of fires and flourish like the proverbial green bay tree because of rotten policies.

Of course the insurance companies will pay for the losses to buildings, equipments, merchandise, and what not in the way of material things, and, sometimes to income and profits.

And the insurance companies while paying do not pay; the public bears the price. The insurance companies only collect and distribute money for indemnity. They do not suffer and are not expected to.

But who pays for the losses which are the inevitable consequence of the destruction of buildings, their contents and other things material; the impairment of prestige, the interruption of business, enterprise, contractual relations, dismemberment of organization and what not else?

A burned building is far more easily replaced than a burned business, and a wrecked enterprise than an incinerated industrial worksite.
That which makes business and industry are not buildings, merchandise, machinery and what else, but the organization of human intelligence.

A fire burns a business building or a factory. These and their contents may be replaced. But far too often the business and the industry, as such, are burned beyond repair. And if not that bad the scars are deep and unforgettable.

Ask any honest man whose soul has been seared by fire.

There is not any insurance for the human distress, economic and otherwise, that follows a fire.

It has been estimated that the uninsurable losses from fire equal the insurable losses. In other words for every dollar of loss in property burned, which is insurable, there is a dollar of loss in business burned or industry incinerated, which is not insurable.

These uninsurable losses are often referred to as interruption losses.

Who may suffer then, with impunity?

And for those who do, the future will deal with much more harshly than has the past.

There will be in the immediate future a fullsome renaissance of the ancient law of the survival of the fittest.

Our once profligate nation will have to think of saving what we have; not building to burn and burning, building again.

As a nation we have been profligate. But there are some particular exceptions.

The most signal exception to our national profligacy, and one which supplies a complete example in economic conservation of enterprise from the destruction and havoc of fire is the textile industry.

The torch of the fire fiend, which has been laying waste to resources of our fair country to the extent of a quarter of a billion dollars annually for a number of years, touches the modern textile indus-
