DAIRY
MILK DELIVERED TO CITIES

Figures Announced by Department of Agriculture on Total Cost to Ultimate Consumer.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The total cost of milk delivered to the consumer's door in Columbus, O., during the first six months of 1920, ranged from 11.3 cents up to 15.3 cents per quart, if the costs of one company which does business in "certified" milk are omitted, according to the figures recently announced by the United States Department of Agriculture. The cost of the raw milk delivered at the dairy ranged from 8.7 cents to 10 cents per quart. The total cost of operating the dairy plant, including the pasteurizing and bottling of the milk, ranged from 1 cent to 1.4 cents per quart, and the cost of delivering the milk from the dairy to the consumer ranged from 1.61 cents to 3.9 cents per quart.

The item of administrative expense varies widely, being as low as two-tenths of a cent per quart for one small company and as high as 1 cent per quart for a large concern.

Two of the seven companies covered were small concerns which produced their own milk supply. The cost of producing the milk for these companies in 1920 was 8.9 cents per quart, which is very similar to the price paid for milk by the larger concerns.

One of the items of cost which has attracted most attention among students of the milk business is the so-called "bottle loss." The department's study indicates that for the companies covered in Columbus this item ranges from one-tenth to two-tenths of a cent per quart.

Great difficulty was experienced in getting any satisfactory information concerning the shrinkage which takes place in the handling and delivery of milk, but according to the best data available this item amounts to between 2.3 per cent and 5.5 per cent of the total volume of milk.

Columbus is a city of 237,031 population, which is reported to consume about 27,000,000 quarts of milk per annum. This milk is supplied by over 2,000 producers, from 15 different counties, and is transported to Columbus from a territory having a radius of 35 miles. Conditions appear to be
