LEGISLATIVE NOTES

Harrison W. Vickers, Jr., Conservation Commissioner of Maryland, introduced seven bills at Annapolis this week. All of the measures, were prepared in an effort to build up the oyster and fish industry.

The first bill provides for an increase in the size of marketable oysters from 2½ to 3 inches, measured lengthwise.

A second bill eliminates September and April from the months in which oysters may be taken for market. It still will be lawful to take oysters for transplanting in the State.

Another bill provides for a tax of 15 cents a bushel of oysters of marketable size taken out of the State for planting.

Repeal of the present law, which provides that two-thirds of the tongers' licenses shall be paid into the school funds of the counties, is sought in the fourth bill. Mr. Vickers says this law keeps $15,000 a year out of the conservation fund.

The fifth bill provides for an increase of crabbers' licenses from $1 to $2.50 for adult crabbers. Minors under 16 years of age will pay $1.

A uniform shad law throughout the State is provided by the sixth bill, with the season closing April 1.

The seventh bill provides for increases in cost of licenses for the various kinds of nets used in commercial fishing.

For bridge construction and elimination of railroad crossings $900,000 will be spent, according to the Govenor's plan.

With reference to funds arising from motor vehicle receipts, Governor Ritchie said:

"In accordance with the law and with the pledge in the Democratic platform, these balances for roads and streets are appropriated in the budget to maintenance and reconstruction, in the proportion of 20 per cent to Baltimore city and 80 per cent to the State roads."

Governor Ritchie received Wednesday representatives of the committee on an agricultural program appointed by him last May. The committee submitted a report last November, and the visit today was to lay before the Governor bills intended to carry the recommendation into effect.

There were seven bill: Providing for the adoption of the Torrens land transfer system; regulating manufacture and sale of olemargerine; relating to breeding horses; regulating drainage for the State; drainage for Somerset county; relating to marketing, standardization and grading of farm products; relating to transportation. There were also three joint resolutions for memorials to Congress on modification of the immigration laws, urging a Federal seed law and a Federal license for commission merchants.

At a meeting of the Chautauqua guarantors held at The Kent County Savings Bank Thursday evening A. H. Covey was elected chairman, and T. D. Bowers, vice chairman. The other officers were re-elected.
