DEATHS

Arthur L. Harris, of near Betterton, died at the Easton Hospital yesterday week. Two weeks ago he was taken sick with a chill. From that developed appendicitis and after that pleurisy and pneumonia. Everything known to science with loving care was done for his recovery, but to no avail and with a smiling good-bye to his wife he died. Arthur Harris' death was indeed a shock. He was loved and respected by everyone who knew him. He was intelligent, fair, honest and sympathetic. As a farmer he knew the burdens, the trials and the heavy handicaps under which this large class are now struggling. But he had faith in the future. He believed in his county, his State and his country. He was sure of a better day coming to the farming industry.
