In March, 1924, he canceled this policy and was paid $24.08

"A SONNET"

The loveliest flower blomms but once
Then fades and drops to earth,
Leaving the shelter of the stem
That gave it birth.

It gave its beauty to our sight
Its fragrance to the air,
So perfect was its form and soul,
Devinely fair.

She came with love into my heart,
I made her captive there,
Her poison walls dismayed her not,
Love drove out fear.

I would have kept this priceless gem,
To have it for my own
The Master took it hence to shine,
For Him alone.

O radiant as the dewey morn
Was this fair love of mine,
Loves tendrils twined about my heart
As doth the vine.

Bereft of sight, all life holds dear
What joys for me survive,
I'd rather pray that I were dead
I have to be alive.

In mercy Lord, grant me surcease,
From sorrow, woe and pain,
I strive the burden of my grief to bear,
But strive in vain.

Submissive to His will, I bow,
Knowing that soon or late
I'll clasp my loved one in my arms
Within the gate.
