Growth and Vitality depend on this one thing—

NO matter what type of bird or animal you raise—no matter how scientifically you feed them—the big question is:

How fast can they turn that feed into flesh and vitality?

If you can find a natural way to speed up digestion and assimilation—to help the animal get the last ounce of nourishment out of every pound of feed—your profits will grow accordingly. And that is exactly what Fleischmann's Pure Dry Yeast does!

This remarkable food-accessory, added in small amounts to the regular daily ration, helps to transform that ration quickly and easily into good solid flesh and healthy energy. Not a bit of nourishment is wasted—and in addition, Fleischmann's Pure Dry Yeast supplies the essential B-Vitamin (the vitamin of growth) in the most highly concentrated form available in all nature.

The results are startling: faster growth—increased vitality and fertility—heavier egg-production for poultry—blue-ribbon winners for fanciers. Scientific breeders the country over have proved the power of Fleischmann's Pure Dry Yeast. It is now on sale right here in town—a trial can will be the best investment you ever made. Come in and get a free booklet on this modern method of animal feeding.

OPERATION ADVISED FRIEND SAID "DON'T DO IT!"

Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound First. Proved Good Advice

Chicago, Illinois.—"Just a few lines to let you know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was married going on for three years, and went to a doctor and was taking treatments twice a week for pains every month. I used to lie in bed three or four days with them and the doctor would call and inject something into my arm to put me asleep so I would not feel the pains. At last she said I would have to be operated on if I wanted any children. Well, I just happened to go to see a friend with her first baby and I told her I was going to the hospital, and she said, 'Don't do it! You go and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you won't need any operation.' So my husband got me a bottle right away. Now I have two lovely children. Believe me, I recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman I know has any kind of female trouble. It has helped me and a lot of my friends."—"Mrs. A. McANDLESS, 1709 S. Morgan St., Chicago, Ill. ANN'S CHOICE

By JANE GORDON

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

ANN STACY, seated at breakfast in her kitchenette apartment, read the inviting advertisement. It described, in the usual glowing terms, certain shore bungalows for sale. The location of this desirable property, the advertisement read, was at a picturesque point easy of access to the bustling and, at this season of the year, boiling city.

Ann rested her elbows on the table and considered. "Why not? The price of the advertised bungalows would be no more than carrying the confining city apartment. Then she would have a real home, all her own.

The article declared that the houses were built suitable for occupancy the year round.

Ann arose briskly, her mind decided; she would ride out on the trolley that very morning to look the place over. She was filled with plans as the trolley carried her on her way. She would buy some new furniture, make new ruffled curtains, start a garden, probably, and when school and teaching began in the fall she would be a new, rested, refreshed creature herself.

She hoped, almost wistfully, that the bungalow might have a sun porch. Always Ann had desired a sun porch; the wish dating, perhaps, from a long-ago stay in a hospital where the sun-room had been her cheer and salvation.

The houses, as she neared them, were all that the advertisement promised, which is saying a great deal. She was planning where the new reed table would go when a man suddenly appeared through the sun-room door. Ann felt antagonistic toward this man at once. There was in his calculating eye a challenge.

"If you are looking at this house with an intention of buying, I must tell you, madame," he said, "that I have decided to purchase it."

"But," Ann remarked, in exactly the tone she adopted when deciding tomorrow's lesson, "but you have not bought it?"

"Practically," the man answered. "I have but to seal the bargain with the agent. It is the sun porch," he added, in explanation, "which appeals especially to me. This is the only one of the lot with a sun porch."

"So?" answered Ann, sweetly. "That also influenced my decision to buy."

The man reflected patiently: "The house is already sold to myself."

"Not quite," Ann reminded him, and then she hurried away.

The tall man watched Ann go down the walk toward a telephone station; then, with a grim smile, he jumped into his waiting car.

"I will take the end bungalow with the sun porch," Ann excitedly informed the agent over the wire, "and will be in the city immediately to make arrangements."

She cut short the agent's remark regarding another possible purchaser, who was at that moment on the bungalow property.

James Tyler reached the agent's office soon after Ann's telephone message.

"I come," he announced, tersely, "to sign the contract for the beach bungalow. It meets my requirements."

The agent paused but a moment. Attractive as the bungalows were, it had taken much advertising to sell them, and when it came to a woman's telephone promise against a man's assured bargain the sun porch house was soldd to Prof. James Tyler.

"That fresh country air will be just the place for my continued studies," he told the agent with satisfaction.

When Ann Stacy heard of the disappointing transaction she was indignant, but not indignant enough to forego her plan of a coming happy vacation, so, perforce, she at length agreed to take as a substitute the cottage next door to the one of her choice.

Professor Tyler was in his garden planting geraniums. In a light summer suit he looked not so forbiddingly profound. Also, his eyes, glancing Annwards, above rimmed glasses, had no baleful light. Ann, herself, appeared different—so thought the professor.

"These opinionated women schoolteachers"—to use the professor's off-on-vacation words—"got his goat."

Ann, though she was no less opinionated in her choice of the house next door, had a softened, submissive expression vastly becoming, and due, perhaps, to her first experience with the "conquering male."

"May I," remorsefully asked the professor, "assist you in planting your garden?"

He had, she grudgingly admitted, an engaging smile.

And when the garden was finally finished, it was only fair for her to repay, by offering to make for the lonely professor's home pretty curtains like her own.

"My housekeeper," he said, and sighed, "is clumsy at such things. Since I have known you, Miss Stacy, I realize fully my unfortunate lack of a wife's ministration"—which was so like a coming proposal that Ann fled toward the house. But the proposal came in due time. And now, to end the story of Ann's house-buying adventure, she sits smilingly content in the very sun-room of her choice, while her husband, the professor, reads his awe-inspiring books near by.

"I won you," he boasts, with a husband's triumph, "the day I carried my way and bought this place."

Ann smiles slyly. "I got my own choice in the end," she declares.

MORTGAGE CASE DECIDED

An interesting case has been decided in the Circuit Court for Cecil County, Thomas C. Riley and wife vs. James E. Woodall, Kent county.

A mortgage on Mr. Riley's farm was held by Mrs. Joseph Summerill and Mr. Riley arranged with the late William T. Warburton to replace this mortgage by another to James E. Woodall for a like amount of $4,000. After Mr. Warburton's death Mr. Riley learned that the Summerill mortgage had not been released, the interest having been kept paid up by Mr. Warburton, while Mr. Riley regularly paid interest to Mr. Woodall. Bills were filed in the Circuit Court and the case heard, the decision being that both mortgages were valid. C. A. Fairbanks, Wm. Pepper Constable and Curtis O. Tyson, counsel for Mr. Riley, took the case to the Court of Appeals, which reversed the decision of the lower Court in regard to the Woodall mortgage and ordered a new trial, the Summerill mortgage being eliminated. As a result of the new trial the Circuit Court, in Equity, has passed an order "that the mortgage described in these proceedings, executed by the Complainants, Thomas C. Riley and Anna D. Riley, his wife, to the defendant, James E. Woodall, dated December 3rd, in the year 1918, and recorded in Liber C. S. P. No. 4, folios 522, etc., a Mortgage Record Book for Cecil County, Maryland, be and hereby is declared invalid, null and void, and without force or effect, and that the property in said mortgage described shall be and is free, clear and discharged of and from the lien and operation of said mortgage."

The costs of the proceedings are placed on Mr. Woodall.

New Light On Cause of Asthma and Hay Fever

The medical world has been groping about in the dark for years in an effort to find a "cure" for Asthma and Hay Fever.

These two ailments are undoubtedly among the most annoying and troublesome ailments man or woman can have.

During recent years, however, clinical experience has proven the fact that Asthma and Hay Fever have their seat of origin in the nerves that emanate from the spine, and the cure of course lies in correcting the trouble from its source.

For every effect (ailment) there must be a cause, and chiropractic is most successful because it strikes at the very source of trouble and removes the cause, so that the effect (ailment) disappears.

William Bright, of Worton, Kent county, suffered with Asthma for a long time. Medicine only seemed to aggravate the trouble, and he found himself on the decline. A friend who had just been cured of a similar ailment took him to Dr. Dill, the Chiropractor, and after a series of Special Adjustments, he was completely restored to health and is now well and strong and advises all who are sick to try Chiropractic.

If you have been ailing talk to someone who has given Chiropractic a fair trial, and you will hear a story of wonderful recovery.
