FARM BUREAU

Messrs. Editors Kent News:

Now the tomato season is over just a few facts of just what has happened here at Rock Hall.

Frank O. Puppie and Henry Ireman motored to Cambridge several times and made arrangements with Phillips & Company to run a boat to shipyard and Taylor's Ranch at a price of 42 cents per basket. The boat was stopped by in fluence of local packers, then Frank O. Puppe got busy and made arrangements with the Sherwood Packing Company at Tilghman's to stand for one trip at 35 cents cash. The price did not suit Messrs. Puppe and Ireman got busy again, and here is where the Farm Bureau comes in, through the assistant of Mr. Puppe getting S. G. Caldwell send boats here at a fancy price of 55 cents, putting in the hands of farmers $20,000. Does it pay to have and belong to the Farm Bureua. I should say it does. So farmers we beg you to join at once and attend the local meeting, as it will help us. The farmers were well pleased with price and service rendered.

FARMERS OF FIFTH DISTRICT

SWEET POTATOES HIGH

The yield of sweet potatoes in the Seaford section is the greatest for many years and the farmers reaping a golden harvest. The greatest yield so far reported is that of J. Roy Cannon and Earl O'Neal. Cannon will have 5,000 baskets of primes and 2,500 baskets of seconds from 13 acres, giving him a yield of between 400 and 500 baskets per acre. Cannon has sold his entire yield to Seaford brokers, receiving 96 cents per basket for his primes and 40 cents for his seconds.

The brokers and growers estimate that there will be stored in sweet potato houses in this immediate vicinity over 250,000 baskets, one house alone in North Seaford, being able to take care of 125,000.

It has been figured out that it cost about $86 an acre on an average to grow sweet potatoes in Lower Delaware, apportioned as follows: Fertilizer, $15; plants $20; use of land, $10; plowing and drilling fertilizer, $4; setting $4; cultivation, $18, and harvesting, $15.

Old Times, Old Loves, Old Friends.

By Belle Caples Morris,
Towson, Md.

O take me back to Sassafras, that land of long ago,
Once beside it's circling water Dwelt a Togwogh Chieftain's daughter,
Listened for her lover's night-call when the crescent moon hung low;
In her birch canoe I see her, by the sunset's after glow,
Mid'st the shadows of the Togwogh, drifting down the long-ago.

Yes! take me back to Sassafras, when the magnolias bloom,
There let me watch the world go by, shut in from all it's gloom;
There each night in gay October, Whether one be drunk or sober,
He may see an Indian Chieftian in his gaudy war canoe,
Drifting down apast the Foxhole, followed by a ghostly crew;
When the hunter's moon is shining, you may see them two by two.

Let's hie away to Sassafras, where Togwogh has it's birth,
And slowly widening, shuts us in from all the ills of earth,
Save only where an Indian Trail Leads to an opening in the vale;
There old legends are remembered, of Tench Tilghman and his ride,
Of Kitty Knight, who saved her home and all the country side,
Whose bright eyes wounded British Knight, but, she his suit denied.

Come, all aboard for Sassafras! the boat swings in the stream,
And Captain Cundiff's at the wheel, bound for the land of dream;
Brice, Boyer, Griffith, Morris, Foard,
I see them as they go aboard—
The mist has gathered in my eyes and slowaly falls in tears,
My heart is looking backward now across the sunny years,
And there it sees a vision which dissolves as it appears.
