Kent News

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1920

The Kent News wishes all, young and old, a most pleasant and happy Christmas.

All communications addressed to the Kent News for publication must be accompanied by the author's name to show good faith. We repeat this rule as we have received several lately that were consigned to the waste basket because author's name was not given.

Christmas is coming!

What joyful tidings for the little folks.

And why should it not be joyful for the grown-ups as well?

Have we reached such an age of skepticism that we do not believe in Santa Claus?

Do we think that the many blessings we receive are just by chance, and that there is no omniscient Santa Claus to shower gifts upon us?

If so, we are in sad plight.

There is a Santa Claus, and He is just as real as we believe Him to be.

Let's hang up a stocking and be ready for His coming.

CHRISTMAS WISHES

The one great holiday observed throughout the world is here again. Does it mean anything more than a holiday? Do you catch the real significance of the occasion? Do you spell the name with an X, which materialistic and takes from it its real worth and sacredness. Sunlight and shadows have marked the history of the passing seasons with a varied interest; sorrows and joys have walked hand in hand, and amid the silvery music of marriage bells, many have become weary of life's pilgrimage and have passed over the river to rest. The Bethlehem star still glows with unshadowed beauty, and the Christmas dawn of 1924 will perhaps find the earth happier, than the old year which is dead.

The sacredly beautiful festival belongs to no particular clime or country, but to an universal humanity. In a thousand ways, the advent of the Christmas season is heralded throughout world. O! poetic season, thy first inception was in the grandest epic which the centuries have ever sung, and thy choirsters of Heaven, has filled the earth with music so rich in its fullness of beauty, so deep in the eternal ebb and flow of its matchless harmony, so profound in its teaching, so comprehensive and masterful in its mighty reach, so sublime in its promise of "Peace on Earth, good will toward men," that notwithstanding the varied changes which have marked its history, Christianity today, as in centuries past, dwells upon the story of the origin of our faith, and the pastoral scenes which add to its beauty.

May its meaning be realized in every home throughout Kent as never before. May the parents as they gather about the festal board or in the home circle, present to the loved ones the great fact of Christmas. How the coming of the babe of Bethlehem was foretold many years ago. How He came to bring salvation to a lost world and that all who would believe in Him and accept His salvation might be saved. Make this Christmas worth while by accepting the Christ as Lord and Redeemer.
