JOHN BARTLEY THE FURNITURE DEALER Chestertown, Maryland. A YOUNG couple were preparing for the thrill of their first experience at having house guests. A middle-aged couple had a boy about to come home with a classmate for a holiday during his first year at college. An elderly couple were making ready with great glee for the visit of their married daughter with the first grandchild. Strangely enough, they all had need of the same article—a Davenport Bed—and they all came to us because they know that we are prepared not only with the article they want, but with the kind of service that lends added cheerfulness to the occasion. Indeed, there is much more to the conduct of a good furniture store than the mere selling of furniture. There is the joy of being genuinely helpful in making the home all that it should be.
