Is Chiropractic A Permanent Relief From Suffering

O. Hynson, of near Worton, Kent County, says it is almost two years ago he called on Dr. Dill for relief from a rheumatic condition on which other doctors failed to help. He was so crippled up that he could not walk more than a few feet at a time.

After taking Dr. Dill's spinal adjustments for a short while he improved, and after several months longer he became entirely free of his affliction and is today a well man. It is almost two years since he first began taking the spinal adjustments and he has not had a recurrence of the trouble since that time. This is published as a special request.

The DAIRY

FOUR QUALITIES OF HIGH PRODUCING COW

The farmer who is willing to milk cows at all should milk only those animals that give large yields of rich milk. These only are profitable; the rest will lose money for you as sure as you're alive.

The wise dairyman, therefore, demands cows with four outstanding qualities or signs: These are sturdy, dairy temperament, well developed milk organs and constitution and vigor. If you will learn these four items by heart and find out what they mean and how to tell them when you examine a cow, you will make more money milking cows than most men.

Cows with feed capacity are full-sized for the age and breed. They will show plenty of room for the storage of feed. They will have long, deep, roomy middles, a wide forehead, broad muzzle, good-sized mouth, strong, shewy jaws and a comparatively long face.

Cows with dairy temperament are best judged by dairy yearling records. They have comparatively long, thin necks; sharp withers; prominent backs, hips and pinbones; thin, in-varying thighs, and a wedge-shaped conformation; free from marked coarseness; slow alertness and marked activity; are not overfed.

Cows with well-developed milk organs have udders of good size for age and stage of lactation, with quarters and udder uniformly developed; have udder extended well forward underneath the body and high up behind and between the thighs; udder well attached to body and not pendulous; udder tissues pliable and free from coarseness and tenderness; udder combined with a good system of large veins underneath the body.

Cows with constitution and vigor are free from all diseases of an infectious nature; have a strong circulation of blood to all parts of the body, indicated by a healthy condition of the hair, oily secretions of the hide, and well-developed veins on the under side of the body and sometimes noticeable on the face and under; show large, open nostrils, prominent bright eyes, and alertness of body. A good heart girth and a good width of body in the region of the heart further indicate constitution and vigor.
