ARRANGE CELEBRATION OF ST. JAMES M. P. CHURCH

Next Wednesday will be a red letter day in the history of St. James M. P. Church when the congregation will observe the one hundredth anniversary with an all day service.
The centennial sermon will be delivered at 10.30 a. m. by the Rev. Dr. C. I. Humphries, president of the Maryland Conference.
The Rev. Dr. Sewell S. Hepburn, rector of old I. U. parish, will be present, also Rev. F. T. Little, of Baltimore; the Rev. George A. Morris, of Harrington, Del.; the Rev. H. B. Jester, of Brooklynn, Md.; the Rev. Avery Donovan, of Fawn Grove, Pa., and other former pastors will have a part in the services of the day, as will M. P. ministers of the town and county.
St. James' was formerly a P. E. parish, but in 1825 it was purchased by a group of Methodist Protestants and since been under the guidance of that denomination.
Some of the most prominent ministers in the Maryland Conference, long since dead, were among the early pastors of the church, which at one time, with Chestertown and Kentonville, as well as Wesley Chapel, near Rock Hall, formed what was known as Kent circuit and often in the olden days the ministers serving the charge traveled to these appointments on horseback.
One of the interesting features of the celebration will be a collection of old papers, books, pictures and other relics of former days, which will be on display at the parsonage during the day.
The celebration is expected to bring together hundreds of former members and friends of the congregation living in Baltimore and other cities.
The Rev. J. Colvin Randall is the pastor of the church; H. Stockton Startt is president of the Christian Endeavor Society, and Robert G. Nicholson is serving his 17th year as superintendent of the Sunday school.
Ralph Usilton, a descendant of one of the organizers of the church is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

DR. PERRY IN VENICE

Washington College Vice-President Writes From Famous Venetian City - Contracts, Venetian And Teutonic Cultures.

Albertus Perry, Ph. D., field vice-president of Washington College, Chestertown, Md., accompanied by his party of students, has reached Italy and as he meditates on the mystery and romance of the renowned city of canals and bridges he compares, in his mind, the artistic atmosphere of ancient Venice with the cultural and educational background of the Gallic and Teutonic centres through which he has recently passed.
Says he, "I am rested on the porch of our hotel in Venice, the most beautiful and at the same time the strangest city in the world. At my feet flows the Grand Canal. Around about me sit tourists from Boston, Chicago, Ohio, Oklahoma and Indiana. I fancy these names will pass inspection in any European city. We are now just watching the shrewd and skillful gondoliers who talk much, work hard and always unceasingly look for business. If Henry Ford depended on Venice for business he would spend his days in the poor house. Although much larger than Wilmington, Del., for instance, yet there is not an automobile in town. In fact there is no mode of travel except by boat and 'Shank's mare'. On the other hand, the bridges are so arranged that it is easy to walk anywhere. But I am not now so much concerned with dreamy Venice as I am in reflecting on events of the past week.
Venice has no university and, I fear, very few schools of any sort while Switzerland and Germany place the emphasis on education. A town possessing a college or a university is different. That is to be expected. Switzerland has compulsory education. So has Germany. I do not mean to infer that education solves all problems but it really does produce an atmosphere of refinement and culture not found elsewhere. Venice is distinctive because of its physical construction. Heidelberg is different because it boasts not only a university but the oldest in Germany. A town having a library of 400,000 volumes possesses inherently more value than a town without a library at all. Heidelberg has such a collection of tomes. Venice has library but few tourists concern themselves about it. Professors draw meager salaries but they incur little or no municipal expense. They do not need policeman. Students are mischievous, not because they are students but because they are just finding themselves. The guide books of Venice say one-third of the inhabitants are paupers. The result, as might be expected, is endless strife for the survival of the fittest. Heidelberg has students. Therefore the whole town studies, inspired by its 3000 university men and women and by its scores of professors.
Any town boasting a college boasts meritoriously. Chestertown and Kent County, Md., should be the envy of other places not so favored. With a population of only a few thousand it yet has, set on a hill, the eleventh oldest college in the United States.
It is nice to roam in Venice but when it comes to living I want to be close to a library, a college and a church. That triumvirate excels the glory of any evanescent pleasure. Now I move on to Florence with its names to conjure with; Dante, Galileo, Savanorola, Michael Angelo, Brunelleschi, Donatello, Fra Angelico and many more. And soon I shall be floating around the waters of the 'Odyssey'."
Watch for Dr. Perry's next letter from Florence.

Imperial Marimba Band

Native Marimbistas Coming To Chestertown

When Henry Monterosso, the dashing leader of the Imperial Marimba Band, soon to play here at the Chautauqua, was asked something about his company of "Marimbistas" he replied:
"My band studied music in Guatemala, C. A., and came to this country with the Marimba instrument in 1915 to play at the Guatemala Pavilion at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco, winning first prize of a gold medal, from where we started with the Orpheum circuit to New York, playing at the Astor Roof Gardens, Ritz Carlton and Biltmore Hotels, and one summer season in Atlantic City at the Million Dollar Pier and the Martinique Hotel. We have played in the leading theatres and hotels throughout the country and have made records, under different names, for the Columbia and Victor Companies.
A strange thing about the marimba is that many of them are constructed by the players themselves. You would never think of Paderewski constructing his own piano or of Paganini or Sarasate making a Stradivarius to play on, yet in the "Excelsior Marimba" you have one that has been constructed by the musicians now about to play on it.
There are families, especially around Quetzaltenango, second largest city of Guatemala, in which the constructing and playing a marimba has become hereditary. The marimba is the native instrument of Guatemala and was played there centuries before the arrival of the Spaniards.
