Again we observe Labor Day in a fitting and appropriate way—rejoicing that our nation has added another year to its history wherein all its workers were busy—happy—and perhaps more prosperous than any people on this earth.

OYSTERMEN EXPECT BETTER SEASON

Throughout the whole of the Eastern Shore of Virginia and Maryland and the tidewater section, business-like methods have been instituted by the oystermen, to prevent the remote possibility of a condition arising, like that, which almost wrecked the industry last winter.

All oyster producing centers, have joined forces to see that the bivalve goes out before the nation, with a tag of purity and merit attached to him.

Strict compliance with all the rules and regulations as laid down by the various Health and Food Departments State and National, will be the aim of every man whose livelihood depends upon the sale of the oyster, and on the Shore and elsewhere, the State is willing to aid in inspection or to suggest improvements which the conditions may require.

The Oyster Growers and Dealers' Association of North America, affiliated with United States Fisheries Association, will conduct a campaign throughout the continent, whereby the lover of oysters and allied products of the sea, will learn that he need have no cause for alarm as all precautions have been taken to protect his sea food supply.

Through the press, the movies and the radio, inland dwellers, will get a new idea of the need of more oysters as a part of the daily fare, and it is expected that everybody on the Shore engaged in the industry will do their bit toward making the campaign the success it should be.

McCall Rasin, assistant operator at the Western Union Telegraph office and the Pennsylvania railroad station has been transferred to Frankford, Del., station, reducing the force here by one man.

Washington College will open on Wednesday, September 16th. The prospects are good for the biggest enrollment in its history.
