Kent News

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1925

It must be gratifying to the citizens of Kent to know that not a ripple was caused in the confidence of the people in the banks of Chestertown by the sad occurrence of Tuesday. All the resources of the banks were promptly placed at the call of the Citizens Bank and business moved along as usual.

DEATH OF A VIGOROUS MAN

In the sudden death of Hope H. Barroll this town and county have lost a citizen of unusual virility. His was a strong character as men measure strength. Anything which he undertook to do, was given an enthusiastic support that knew no such word as failure. He was strong in his likes and dislikes and the News editors know this as much as anyone else and we draw the white mantle of charity over it all.

There is an old Eastern legend of the weaver who sits at his loom, and hour by hour and day by day slowly the shuttle clicks back and forth as the intricate design is woven into the fabric. He works in the dark, and the pattern is fashioned on the other side.

This is more than a legend, it is a symbol of life. For life is the weaving, thread by thread, of a more wonderful design than we know.

Sometimes through accident a thread breaks; and it takes patient and delicate work by the weaver to tie the broken ends that the weaving may be resumed.

This also is a symbol of life, for the kindly hands of the unseen Weaver lovingly unites the shattered threads that the design may be continued,

Now and then there comes to a community the hours of a great crisis, when men's faith is tested to the utmost strength, and women's hearts are tried to tears. Folks wonder and ask the question, "Why?" And there seems to be no answer—or not the answer we expect.

Such is the shocking event which has stirred this community this week. As none can know the unusual care that bore so heavily upon him so we dare not pass judgment upon the act nor impugn the motive.

Hope H. Barroll had marked force and influence possessed by but few men and won many professional honors. He won the unreserved confidence and esteem of a large circle of friends and was just and honorable in his dealings with his fellows. He had a devoted and charming wife, with four boys the pride and joy of his life, with a home unsurpassed here for beauty of location and adornment, it would seem that life held an alluring prospect for him, and yet something broke in the delicate mechanism of his brain and he is gone.

We draw the curtain and hope that He who knoweth all things will alleviate the suffering of the family whose loss is irreparable and whose sorrow and grief immeasurable. May the community profit by the good in his life and imitate the many charitable deeds he committed.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

The Kent News is in hearty sympathy with all proper efforts to prepare for fighting fires. But it is far better to prevent fires and for this reason we refer to Fire Prevention Week

Since it is to his home that every man instinctively goes in quest of absolute safety there is grim irony more than a little, in the revelation that somebody's dwelling suffers attack by fire every three minutes, approximately—that the average yearly destruction of homes approaches $66,000,000. Plainly the safety that he seeks is not to be found around the average American hearth. It appears from the published record that four of the six leading causes of fire in the home—Defective Chimneys and Flues; Sparks on Roofs; Stoves, Furnaces, Boilers and their Pipes, and Matches—Smoking — indubitably are preventable by the exercise of proper care and common sense. The August issue of Safeguarding America Against Fire presents complete plans for community observance of National Fire Prevention Week, October 7-10. The National Board of Fire Underwriters, New York, stands ready to do everything within its power to facilitate the campaign and will welcome communications from fire chiefs local agents, municipal official, school authorities the fire chiefs, local authorities, membership of business organizations and all others who will participate in the event. Surely a people virile and farsighted enough to found a nation can muster sufficient intelligence and strength of will to preserve it from the wasting of fire—starting with their homes.

THE FIREMEN CARNIVAL

The great carnival to be held in Chestertown beginning today is for the purpose of equipping the local company with fire equipment to be used in fighting fires in Kent and elsewhere when called.

It is hoped that it will create not only a splendid profit for the company but will also serve to provide clean, wholesome entertainment and amusement for thousands of pleasure seekers.

It has been quite a few years since an elaborate benefit has been held for the local firemen. There has been several small entertainments and similar attractions, but this is the first time for a long period that an effort has been made to raise a really really worth-while amount for this most efficient group of volunteers.
