VALLEY HUNT CLUB MAY AVOID SHORE

Following the riding down of four fox hounds of the Green Spring Valley Hunt Club March 19, when T. Dudley Riggs, a member of the club, is said to have struck at a farmer, the annual visits of the club's hunters and hounds to the Eastern Shore are expected to be discontinued.

The Baltimore riders were the guests of Eastern Shoremen at Chestertown when the hounds were injured. Members of the club said the hounds were ridden down by Eastern Shore farmers who attempted to save a dock-tail fox from death. Patrick Brady, huntsman of the club, reported the leg of one hound broken. This hound is not expected to be able to run again.

Some Eastern Shoremen assert that the Baltimoreans rode down their own pack. Charging the Baltimore riders with unsportsmanlike conduct D. W. Ingersoll, of Chestertown, said:

"The 'dock-tail' fox is a local institution that we value highly and it was only upon the direct promise of the M. F. H. not to kill this fox that we agreed to take the hunt to him.

"We started him hot as usual, with no delay, but with his second round it became evident that the master's pledge was not to be kept.

"The huntsman said: "Of course we will kill him; what do you suppose we came here for?"

"Some of our local hunters then took a hand and crossed ahead of the hounds, turning them back.

"The only hound ridden over was one the huntsman himself rode over. Thereupon he struck at one rider and was promptly landed on by another.

"The M. F. H. then had the gall to impugn our sportsmanship, when he might better have apologized for trying to break his promise."

Mr. Brady denied that any explicit promise concerning the killing of the fox was obtained from the Baltimore hunters.

"I know our hounds and when the fox was brought out I asked if he could run," Mr. Brady said. "I was told that he had run for two and three hours before the Eastern Shore hounds. I then warned that our hounds might and could bring the fox to cover in an hour. One of the members of the Eastern Shore club said that if the fox had to be killed, it must be so, but that if we couldn't help killing him, then that would be O. K.

"Eight or nine farmers rode into our pack, and they are responsible for the injuries to the hounds."

Mr. Riggs said that statements in Mr. Ingersoll's letter were incorrect. He asserted that no promise had been made by the master of fox hounds. Mr. Riggs declined to comment on reports that he had become so incensed at the farmers riding into the hounds that he attempted to strike one of them.

"We'll never go back there again," Mr. Riggs said.

Janon Fisher, Jr., and George Brown, Jr., are joint masters of the Valley hounds.

A YOUNG COUPLE GET MARRIED IN TOWN

The Philadelphia Bulletin contained the following hard-luck story last Thursday, April 1st, but its not an April fool:

"His bride cried, but it made no difference. Patrick Fahey, Harlan St., near 19th spent last night in jail, and he was married yesterday.

He was picked up by State police in Wilmington, who were searching for a certain kind of small sedan which was used by robbers in a hold-up earlier in the day. Patrick had nothing to do with that, but the troopers learned he was driving an automobile that was not registered.

Patrick told the troopers he took his sweetheart, Anna Smith, a neighbor, to Elkton yesterday. Two friends accompanied them. But when the marriage license clerk was told Patrick was only twenty, he refused to issue the document.

That was the first difficulty he encountered on his wedding day. Someone volunteered the information that he might drive on to Chestertown Md., and age a year during the drive. And Patrick did.

The ceremony was performed in Chestertown and the wedding party started back to Philadelphia. Three miles north of Wilmington, at the State troopers' booth, trouble descended upon them again.

The bride stormed and wept. And Patrick was none too pleased or cheerful. But the troopers would not allow an unregistered automobile to use the highway, and Patrick went to Wilmington jail.

First there was a consultation in which Patrick, his bride and the two friends took part. It developed that, among them, they had had only $10 that sum, $1.70 was left. The three boarded a trolly car for this city.

Patrick was slated for a hearing before Magistrate Gluckman in Wilmington.

The police were watching the highways for a sedan used by three men who attached a man in Washington.

The marriage was somewhat of a surprise to Patrick's mother, Mrs. Fannie Fahey, but she took it philosophically.

"I've seen the young lady," she said, "but, I don't think her name was Anna Smith. At least, not the one I saw.

"Pat does odd jobs around town—mechanical work—and he left the house yesterday as usual. I never knew he was to be married.

"Said he was twenty, did he? Well, he's nineteen. But that's all right. I'll not worry, for I have five other sons that'll keep me worrying enough."

HARRISON GROWN

Asparagus

The preparation of the bed should be made in a most thorough manner, as it is to last for a number of years. A deep, sandy loam with an abundance of decayed organic matter is the best soil.

Planting is best done in the spring as early as the soil can be worked in good condition. Run furrows with plow and clean out with shovel to a depth of one foot. Place well-rotted stable manure thickly in the trench, then just a slight covering with the soil, on top of which place the crowns about 2 feet apart; spread out the roots and cover them very shallow. After the plants start to grow, work the soil to them gradually until it becomes level. The plants should be frequently cultivated and kept clean.

The dead tops should be mown off in the fall and furrows should be thrown on the rows from each side, and the middles cleaned out. This will cause the bed to warm up early in the spring.

If big shoots are wanted you must manure and fertilize heavily, for on the fertility of the soil depends the profit of the crop. Five hundred pounds of Kanit to an acre, applied in the fall when budding, and five hundred pounds of acid phosphate harrowed in, in the early spring, will answer where commercial fertilizers are used. Asparagus is a gross feeder, and the soil can scarcely be made too rich.
