BAND OFFERS ITS SERVICES

The Haughton Bros. Orchestra, of Baltimore, formerly of Chestertown, furnished music for the opening spring dance of the Merry Makers' Union at the K. of P. Auditorium, Chestertown, Md., March 26th, 1926. It was a galla affair, the music was of a standard quality, accompanied with melody, rympth, harmony, jazz and syncopation. These boys have become the pride of Baltimore City, having three times won in the series contest fo a silver loving cup that will be presented to the winner at the final. At the Royal Theatre, Baltimore, Their qualification has not been equaled south of New York City. They are Clifton S., cornetist; Chauncey M., violin, clarinet and saxophonist; John E., trombonist; Arlington T., drums. The latter has become one of the greatest trap drummers in the country, and has never met his equal. They will be transferred to Atlantic City, N. J., this coming summer. 1t

The DAIRY

SUITABLE FEEDING FOR BRED HEIFERS

Bred heifers should receive particularly good care. This is especially true of those that will freshen during the next six months, says J. W. Bartlett, dairy husbandman at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

It is not enough to feed the bred heifer on roughage alone. Such a heifer will continue to grow until she calves, if given a good supply of feed. After freshening she will be obliged to use all of her feed for body maintenance and milk production, so the dairyman cannot expect rapid growth after the first freshening.

The basis of the feed for the pregnant heifer can well be a good legume hay and silage if these are available. She should have all the hay she will clean up twice daily and 20 to 25 pounds of silage. Until about six weeks before freshening she should be given a good growing ration. About five pounds daily of a ration consisting of equal parts by weight of corn, oats, bran and oil meal, will give good results. If she is not fat the ration should contain at least two parts of corn meal or hominy to one of the other ingredients. It may seem that the heifer is getting heavy over the shoulders and taking on a beefiness, but she will milk off this heaviness and produce a higher testing milk than if she freshens in a thin condition.

At least a month before freshening, the heifer should be put in a box stall or in the stanchion row so that she will become used to being handled. She can be watched better in such a place, also. A heifer in good or high flesh will probably have a caked udder. This need not cause worry if she is kept out of draughts and not allowed to lie on wet, cold ground immediately after freshening. Two weeks before calving, if the udder is caked, the ration should be changed to bran and oil meal, and a few days before freshening the oil meal should be discontinued. To reduce udder congestion after freshening, bran only should be fed as a grain ration for the first few days. Leaving the calf with the heifer for three or four days also will tend to relieve the condition.

Feeding Cows by Guess Is Quite Costly Habit

Feeding cows with the scoop shovel or by the "guess" method is quick, but also costly.

For if every cow in a herd of 18, explains E. J. Perry, New Jersey state dairy specialist, were overfed only one-half pound of grain daily for a month, the owner of the herd would lose $6.48 per month when feed is selling for $48 per ton. If the cows were underfed the same amount, he would lose 810 pounds in the month. Figuring milk at $3 per hundred pounds, this milk would be worth $24.30. Subtracting the $6.40 grain cost would leave $17.90, the net loss to the man so underfeeding. In the course of a year such a method would lose the herd owner $200.

Better overfeed a little, however, than to underfeed. Of course, no cow can be fed perfectly. Perhaps the old general rule familiar to successful dairy farmers will not be improved upon very soon. It is this: Give a cow all the good roughage she will clean up, and in addition feed one pound of concentrates a day for each three or four pounds of milk, depending on its richness.

Rules for feeding are merely statements of facts that apply to the average of large numbers of animals. Individual cows are very similar to individual persons and have differences in their inherent capacities. Therefore, a rule should only be a starting point in the feeding problem. The man who does not study his cows and cater to their peculiarities will get ahead faster if he blindly follows rules than if he feeds by guess or with a scoop shovel. The man who is most successful is he who, knowing the principles of feeding, adapts his practices according to his conditions and circumstances, to meet the individual needs of his cows.

Warts on Cow's Teats

The exact cause of warts on a cow's teats is unknown, but irritation from milking may cause these on the teats. The milk is safe for use. Warts that have slim necks may be snipped off with blunt scissors, a few at a time; then apply ticture of iodine. Masses of small warts will disappear after a time if you wet them often with a solution of one tablespoonful of washing soda in a pint of warm water, or with oil of white cedar (thuja) or if you apply a 10 per cent ointment of that oil.

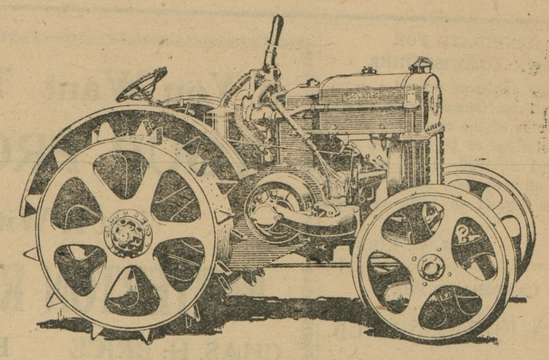

Ration for Dairy Cow

As long as cows with only a medium production are on rye or wheat pasture, ground corn and ground oats, half and half, make as good a ration as one can feed. Ground corn and bran mixed, two parts corn to one part bran, also make a good combination. The standard 4-2-1 ration consists of 4 parts of corn crops, 2 of bran or oats and 1 of cottonseed or linseed meal. In either case the grain can most profitably be fed, 1 pound to 4 pounds of 3½ to 4 per cent milk.

Danger Somewhere

Two men were watching two women pitching their tent at an auto camp in the mountains. "It's dangerous for women to be traveling around alone that way," remarked one, as the women set up their cots and unrolled their bedding. Just then one of the women opened a satchel, pulled out a big revolver, dumped out some cartridges and began cleaning and oiling the weapon. "Yes," said the other man, "it is dangerous. Might be dangerous."
