TRI-STATE CANNERS SEE POOR PROSPECT

According to canners who gathered at the executive meeting of the Tri-State Canners' Association at the Hotel du Pont Monday, prospects for the canning industry on the Delmarvia Peninsula for the coming season are poor at this time. Nelson B. Fooks, of Preston, Md., president of the association, presided.

It was said present indications are that the acreage of tomatoes this year will be less tha nin former years that it is too early to forcast about the acreage of corn. but the pea crop now coming on, due the first two weeks in June. shows a decrease in acreage.

The prices being obtained for the canned goods now in storage appeared to be the chief matter discussed. It was reported that on Saturday one chain store in this section was selling three two-pound cans of tomatoes for 19 cents. This is the lowest price asked for such commodities during the past few years.
