FIRST AID TEAMS

First aid teams of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company lined up for inspection at a competitive contest

Holding high the banner of accident prevention, telephone men all over the country are waging a campaign for safer working conditions.

Among telephone employees in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, there has been a very marked reduction in lost time accidents, since this campaign has been under way.

Last year among the 3,000 employes of the company's plant department there were only twenty-seven lost time accidents, a record that has never been equalled in the company's history. In 1924, there were thirty-three lost time accidents; thirty, the year previously; forty, in 1922, and 108 in 1921.

An important factor in accident prevention is a knowledge of first aid. First aid work was inaugurated among the forces of the telephone company in the fall of 1921, at which time sixteen men were selected from among the plant forces to take an intensive course in first aid training. These men were sent to Washington and given a course of training under the direction of Major Matthew J. Shields of the American Red Cross. On the completion of their work these men, rated as experts, returned to their respective districts, where they organized classes for the purpose of passing on their knowledge, which was planned eventually to reach every man engaged in plant work.

Following a scheduled and well-mapped program, the plant forces attended mass-meetings, demonstrations, and other first aid activities until all became interested in the work.

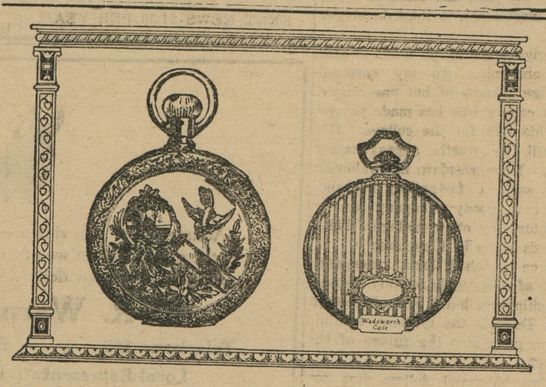

The first classes organized were among the supervisory officials in each district. When these had completed the course, they in turn became instructors to the foremen who instructed the men of their crews. With this part of the program well under way, all of the men on the "firing line" became active in first aid work. Within a few months after the inauguration of the campaign, 90 per cent. of the plant telephone employees had completed the initial course.

The men were then formed into teams which were drilled for competition with the teams of each district. In turn the districts were to compete with the teams of other districts and in this way, a great deal of interest was worked up among the forces. The forming of men into teams and practicing to perfect their individual, as well as the team, work with eyes set for the goal of supremacy in the organization, was an incentive of tremendous value. Step by step through the units of organization these teams have fought their way to the top—the successful team becoming the district champions and holders of the first aid cup for proficiency in first aid.

In the contests which are held in the spring of each year, the teams representing their districts are given problems, the nature of which are unknown before hand, with instructions to prepare the patient for transportation to the nearest hospital. For instance, a patient may be supposed to have sustained a severed artery, a fractured limb and sever shock. Bandages and splints are placed, the injured man is warmly covered and placed on a stretcher. In many cases stretchers are made of tools, with which the men work, put together with overall jackets or coats, and in this way, the patient is prepared for transportation.

With such courses worked along a well organized plan, telephone men have eliminated hundreds of serious accidents among their fellow workmen, and have been of material assistance in many accident cases with the public. Hardly a day passes that some telephone employee does not render first aid to the public.

Those who have witnessed such contests cannot help being impressed with the interest with which the men carry on the work of accident prevention and first aid. They realize the value to themselves, and vie with each other in demonstrating their ability to assist humanity in distress.

Watches, Like Clothes, Have Changed in Style

Are you carrying a watch of the "tile hat" period?

AS the "tile" hat and hoop skirt have been discarded for later styles, so should the modern thin watch in its beautiful case of latest design replace the cumbersome heirloom of other days. Is your watch as modern as the clothes you wear?

Come in and let us show you our distinctive line of all that is newest in watches—beautifully dressed in Wadsworth cases.

FARM INTEREST IN RADIO

Radio is changing the marketing methods of entire groups of farmers, according to a survey made recently by the national farm radio council, says the Washington Post editorially.

The purpose of the survey was to determine just what radio means to farmers and also to find out the exact time in the day or evening when farmers make the greatest use of their receiving sets.

Ninety-five per cent. of the farmers who own radio sets think of their radios as a utility as well as an amusement device. It is a utility because it brings to them market reports from 24 to 48 hours earlier than they are obtainable in any other way. This enables the farmer to market his produce to the greatest advantage. Weather reports often save him hundreds, perhaps thousands, of dollars.

The radio enables the farmer to keep in touch with the leaders, to hear their talks on matters of current importance to the agricultural industry.

The maximum farm audience over the radio is between 8 and 8:30 in the evening. The size of the noon farm radio audience is astonishing, reaching a little more than 60 per cent. of the farm radio owners. In some States this percentage reaches 75 or more.

Orchestra or band music takes first place in choice of amusement, educational talks and weather reports taking second place. Jazz is pretty generally given last place on the list.

Without doubt, the radio on the farms is a powerful agency for broader education, and for closer union between the farm and the city. One of the big problems of the day is how to keep the young people contented on the farms. The call is to the city; and unless modern science and invention can meet the demand, and satisfy the cravings of the boys and girls and men and women on the farms, there will be more abandoned farms than ever.

WIRED PHOTOGRAPHS AID BANK NOTE CO.

The telephotographic service of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company proved a real friend in time of need recently to the American Bank Note Company, which is one of the latest of the large industrial organizations to experiment with this service.

A client in California desired the company to proceed with the preparation of a large quantity of stock certificates, but the time allowed for delivering the certificates was rather short, in view of the work involved in getting corrected proofs, in preparing the steel engravings, in printing the actual certificates and in making delivery. In this emergency the telephotographic service was tried and a photograph of the stock certificate model was sent to San Francisco. The next day word was received from the client that the model was approved and work started immediately on the engravings in New York.

"ON THE JOB"

The part played by the telephone in aiding the police was strikingly illustrated the other day in New York City, says Telephony.

A telephone rang on the desk of Lieutenant George Thompson, in charge of the detective bureau at police headquarters. The call came from Arthur S. Clear, of Scarsdale, N. Y., who reported the theft of his automobile from in front of his house, but while he was still on the line Lieutenant Thompson's other telephone rang. The Scarsdale man was asked to hold the wire while the lieutenant answered the other call.

This call proved to be from a detective in Jersey City, who reported that two negroes in an automobile, which was believed to be stolen, were being held at Jersey City headquarters. The license number of the automobile turned out to be the same as that which the police lieutenant had just jotted down as belonging to the man in Scarsdale. Mr. Clear, still on the line, was notified that his car, he had just reported stolen, was at police headquarters in Jersey City.

This is the first time a stolen automobile has been reported found at the same time that it was reported lost.

KEEP COWS OFF EARLY PASTURE

Plan your milk crop as you plan other crops, in summer as well as winter. This is the best advice we can give to cow owners, who at this season of the year usually are looking to spring pasture to solve their feeding problems.

If, in their enthusiasm to cut down farm work, dairymen turn their cows out too early, they run the risk of injuring both pasture and cows. Keep cows in the barn on a full grain ration, until you know you can turn them out without sacrificing profit.

Long ago, when cows had no other function but motherhood, they were required only to produce milk enough for their calves. Spring and summer grass was adequate for this purpose, and after the calf had grown old enough for dry feed, it made no difference whether the mother gave milk or not.

But men have improved on nature by breeding and feeding for milk production. Cows today are really milk machines, yet many dairymen still take advantage of the first spring grass and rely on it to keep up milk yield without any supplementary ration.

No farmer would think of plowing a field without knowing what he was going to plant in it, and without thinking ahead to the harvest he expects to get. Why should not milk be regarded as a crop, just like any other farm product, and planned ahead in the same way?

At least every dairyman owes it to himself to learn the facts about grass—when it should be fed and when it shouldn't, what it can do and what it cannot, how it should be combined with grain to make the most economical and productive ration.

Early spring grass not only lacks nourishment in the quantity a cow requires, but it is so tender that it is easily damaged by close cropping and by the trampling hoofs of cows.

Consequently, dairymen who turn their cows out to pasture too soon are certain to pay for it in lower milk yield during the summer months, and at the same time are likely to do irreparable damage to good pasture land.

Don't be in a hurry to use pasture. The grass won't run away. It will only grow stronger and more luxuriant if you give it a chance to get a good start in spring. Until you are sure you can turn your cows out without hurting either them or your pasture, keep your herd on a full grain ration.

Levina Bullen Fogg
vs.
Lewis T. Fogg

In the Circuit Court for Kent County
In Equith, No. 2408.

The object of the Bill filed in the above entitled case is to procure a Decree for divorce a vinculo matrimonii.

The Bill states:

1. That on the 11th day of August. 1921, Levina Bullen Fogg was married to the said Lewis T. Fogg, in Elkton, Maryland, by the Rev. W. R. Moon, and she resided with her said husband, Lewis T. Fogg, at interrupted intervals in Kent County, Maryland. until April 14, 1923.

2. That although the conduct of your Oratrix towards her husband the said Lewis T. Fogg, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach. the said Lewis T. Fogg has, without any just cause or reason, failed at all times since their marriage to contribute anything towards her maintenance and support and without any just cause or reason, on April 14. 1923. abandoned and deserted her; that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years; that the same is deliberate and final and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectations of a reconciliation.

3. That no children were born to your Oratrix and the said Lewis T. Fogg as a result of said marriage and your Oratrix has always behaved herself as an affectionate, kind and chatse wife towards the said Lewis T. Fogg.

4. That your Oratrix has been a resident of Kent County, State of Maryland, for more than two years last past and and she believes that the said Lewis T. Fogg is now living in the State of New Jersey, he being a non-resident of th State of Maryland.

It is thereupon, this 29th day of April A. D. 1926, ordered by the Circuit Court for Kent County, in Equity, that the Plaintiff. by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Kent County. once in each of four successive weeks before the 31st day of May next, give notice to the said Lewis T. Fogg, non-resident defendant. warning him to appear in this Court in person. or by Solicitor, on or before the 15th day of June next. to show cause, if any he has, why a Decree ought not to be passed as prayed.
