VIOLINIST AND PIANIST AT SMITH HALL APPEAR WITH TENOR COLAFEMINA

In the concert Tuesday evening, held at William Smith Hall, under the auspices of Washington College, Signor Colafemina, eminent tenor, will be assisted by Edna Coates, violinist, and Emily Sibley Harris, pianist and accompanist. Miss Coates received her musical education at the Philadelphia Musical Academy, one of the oldest and largest colleges of music in this country, and was second in its history to receive the coveted degree of Bachelor of Music. Miss Harris, also a Philadelphian, has been for some years closely allied with musical activities both in that city and in Canada where she has made extensive tours. Signor Colafemina is fortunate in having two such representative artists associated with him. Those sponsoring the concert feel confident in saying that the program will be one of the best ever presented in Chestertown.

MANY WORSHIP IN ANCIENT CHURCH

Old Bohemia, Cecil County, Scene Of Impressive Ceremony—Mass Celebrated On The Grounds.

Field mass on the site of the first Catholic school in America, at Old Bohemia Church Sunday, brought several thousand people to the historic spot. Mass was celebrated by the Rev. James F. Earner, of Sacred Heart Church, Chestertown. The services were held in the cemetery beside the old church which is the original edifice erected by Father Thomas Mansell in 1704.

The ceremony in the morning was conducted by Father Earner in the presence of the Rt. Rev. Edmund J. FitzMaurice, Bishop of Wilmington. The panegyric was delivered by the Rev. Father Delaney, of Washington. The Rev. Patric A. Brennan, pastor of St. John's Church, Newark Del., acted as deacon, the Rev. John J. Bolen, chancellor of the diocese, subdeacon.

Deacons of honor were the Rev. Charles P. McGoldrick, of Mother of Sorrows Church, Centreville, and the Rev. P. Louney, O. S. F. S.

Old Bohemia is officially known as St. Francis Xavier's Mission. It was the first Catholic Church on the Eastern Shore and none in Dalaware or Pennsylvania antedates it. Until 1790 it was what is now known as Georgetown University. In that year the college was relocated near Washington and St. Francis Xavier was remade into a preparatory school.

In the days while a college it numbered among its students, Charles, Carroll, of Carrollton, one of the signers of the Declaration and John Carroll, first Catholic bishop of the United States.

The mass was in the nature of a memorial in honor of the distinguished past. The idea was conceived by Father Charles A. Crowley, pastor of Middletown and Bohemia. He hopes to see Sunday's program an annual affair. The church is well worth a visit. Joined to it by a colonade is the old school in which the "Carroll of Carrollton" spent years preparing himself to take his place in history.

Efforts will be made by Del-Mar-Va members of the Catholic Church to preserve these shrines, and Cecil county Catholics will appeal to all to aid in the preservation of the St Xavier College because of its connection with Carroll. Two other Catholic churches on the Eastern Shore Coffee Run and Old Saint Joseph's are also rich in the Colonial history of Maryland and the entire country.

Both church and house at St Francis Xavier's were built in 1804 by the Jesuit fathers who founded there the first Catholic school in America. Situated on the banks of the Bohemia River, two miles from Warwick, Md., the site of the earliest endeavors of the Jesuits in the New World was the place of pilgrimage yesterday of a colorful procession of priests of both high and low degree that wound its way among the ancient oaks, past the graveyard in which sleep the dead of two centuries ago, and up to the altar.

At 11 o'clock a descendant of those early Jesuit fathers stood on the high altar and delivered the sermon to the assembled hundred. Father Delaney, a Jesuit priest, had come from Washington to preach the sermon of the occasion as 222 years of priestly endeavor was celebrated at Bohemia Manor. For it was just that long ago that the Jesuits sailed across the Chesapeake Bay from Baltimore, up the Big Bohemia River to the spot where the ancient church now stands at the junction of both streams between Warwick and Middletown.

There the Jesuits settled and their forms and broad acres are even now owned and supervised by the Jesuit orders. Here they founded St. Francis Xavier's School, which, in 1790, was transferred to Washington and became the genesis of Georgetown University. It was then that the Sulpician Father reopened Bohemia as a preparatory seminary, under the Rev. Ambrose Marechal, who followed in the footsteps of John Carroll as Bishop of Baltimore. In 1799 they withdrew to Baltimore.
