"Rose-Marie" even more pert, piquant and persuasive than on her former visits will return to the Auditorium, Baltimore, beginning Monday night, January 17. This "Rose-Marie" will be found to be vocally as charming as before; pictorially as sensational, and in the manner of the dance quite as stirring to the enthusiasm. "Rose-Marie" is something more than epochal. In a way, she is a turning point in operetta. The Hammerstein play is to the theatre today what the Gilbert and Sullivan plays were half a century ago. But there is this to be added, "Rose-Marie" appeals to the musical intelligence the eye for color, and the appreciation for a new story in what is comparatively a new continent. Mr. Hammerstein has kept up his play to a high standard in cast, costuming and sartorial adornment, which shows that he understands the full value of his unusual piece of theatrical property. Out of town mail orders will be filled and returned at once. Include self addressed envelope, please.

To The Fish Consuming People Of Maryland

One of the most prominent journals of Baltimore City is promulgating some of the most insidious prevaricating propaganda that ever went in print in attempt to destroy the commercial fisheries of Maryland and turn the free waters of the Chesapeake Bay over to the sporting angler as a sportsman's paradise, as they have the Severn and some other creeks of our State. They want to abolish certain kinds of net fishing and severely curtail all other kinds of commercial net fishing. The sportsmen are shooting out this sort of diabolical propaganda under the cloak of conservation, but the man or woman that enjoys fish for his Friday dinner or any other meal better beware of the wolf in sheep's clothing, the self styled sportsman, for he is stalking you. We wish the public to earnestly consider this matter, take it up with your Representatives at Annapolis, ere the angler gets him, and through some gross prevarication lures him on to pass a law that will destroy the commercial fishermen, deprive him of his right to make a living and furnish the people fish to eat as his forefathers have done since Capt. John Smith sailed into the Chesapeake and landed at Jamestown May 13th, 1607. Our Conservation Commission, Mr. Earle says there more rock fish in Maryland to day than was ever known before, despite the fact that the net fishermen have been plying their trade. Since March 25, 1634, when Lord Calvert let go his anchor in a beautiful river in Southern Maryland and named it Saint Mary's, in honor of his patron Saint. It is the hard working net fishermen, they are the men that work through the storms and sleet of winter to supply the multitudes with fish to eat. Therefore we conjure the public to talk it over with their Representatives, state the case to him; don't let him be led astray by the silver-tongued sporting angler. You may lay to it, the sport will never give you a fish. The angler, in his great concern, for the conservation of the rock fish, is only impelled by his own avaricous greed in trying to bamboozel our Governor and the general public into the erroneous belief that the rock fish are being exterminated in the waters of this State, when as a matter of fact, both Mr. Earle, our Conservation Commission, and our chief game warden, Mr. LeCompte, say over their own signatures, there is more rock fish in the waters of Maryland than ever known before. In conclusion, we wish to say, if our Governor Ritchie, will give a few of us practical fishermen a hearing before he takes further action in this matter of fish and fishing, we will show him both sides of the case, and prove to him the truth of our accusations and assertions, hoping he will grant us this hearing.
