Camp Fire Girls

The first people who first tried to talk and wrote to each other, used symbolic or signs with the hands with their voices by making sounds to express the symbol, or by drawing pictures in the sands or cutting them in stone or wood. Symbolism is as old as the first man and woman, and so common that we forget to notice it, for we never think of our alphabet as being a collection of symbols for sounds.

Long ago people were interested in meanings. All through the art of the the ancient peoples, the Assyrians, Egyptians and Greeks, we find that a leaf or a flower or a curve in design was not a pleasing arrangement of them, but a symbol for an ideal. As late as the Gothic art, we find symbolism in everything. Just look at the arches and spires of a Gothic cathedral. You can find pictures of Rheims, Chattoes, Cologne or an English cathedral. See the hands pointed upwards in adoration or prayer in the points of the arches. See the idealism and belief behind the design.

And then suddenly people became modern and designs were copied and adapted and the adaptions copied and readapted. And the symbolism was lost and forgotten. Camp Fire has recaptured for its members some of that forgotten beauty of symbolism that beauty of meaning as well as beauty of line and color, by bringing back the simplest use of symbols.—From Book of the Camp Fire Girls, Lucile Rasin, Scribe.

OPERATORS ANNOUNCE ANTHRACITE REDUCTION

Through the anthracite operators' conference the Delaware Lackawanna and Western Coal Company, one of the largest producers of anthracite announced reduction in the mine price of egg coal from $8.75 to 8.15; stove coal from $9.25 to 8.75; chestnut from $8.75; to $8 25 a ton, effective April 1.

At the same time the trade was advised that prices would be advanced 25 cents on June 1, and 25 cents a ton on September 1. This represents a change in the practice of previous years when spring reductions were made, the advances then being ten cents a month until the normal price level was reached.

Interest in the progress of a bill recently introduced in the legislature for the supervision of building and loan associations in Maryland, is being shown. According to the bill as now drawn, all building and loan associations in this State would be supervised by the State Tax Commission. Advocates of the measure assert that it has good possibility of passage. The building and loan associations of this State, it is pointed out, are without any sort of Government supervision at this time. At the last preceding session of the Legislature endeavors were made to have these institutions placed under the jurisdiction of some official agency, but opinions varied as to what State office should be charged with the work. The present bill, it is understood, meets the approval both of the bankers of Maryland, and of the building and loan association section of the Real Estate Board which included a large proportion of the building associations of the State.

A collision occurred Sunday evening near Fairlee between cars driven by Louis F. Gesswein and John Hubbard when the former attempted to pass a car that was preceding him and Mr. Hubbard, traveling alone in the opposite direction, was too close. Both machines were damaged and all of L. F. Gesswein's family were injured, he being hurt about the legs, his wife cut on the head and body; his daughter, Mrs. Anna Weaver, had some teeth knocked out; a grandson, Walter Weaver, has an injured head and Miss Elizabeth Weaver is bruised about the body. Mrs. Gesswein is the most seriously injured.

Mrs. Frank Hartman, who has been suffering from heart trouble for some time, was called to Baltimore to see relatives in a hospital. To increase the tronble, two of her half-sisters, Mrs. Mamie Hodges Stavely's grandchildren, Audrey and Earl Oldershaw, have been bitten by their pet fox terrior and are taking treatments of anti-rabies serum.

At a meeting in Chestertown recently two members of the Easton firemen were asked to be present. On Monday night these men reported the result of their trip. It was stated that Chestertown was organizing a woman's auxiliary, and in the course of the evening it was stated that Chestertown firemen responded to a fire in 45 seconds. At the recent fire here an outsider pulled his watch when the siren blew, and the firemen made a better showing, their time being 40 seconds.—Star-Democrat.

Chestertown has beat this record by 5 seconds.

A year of preparation for this great moment!

A YEAR ago the Adler-Rochester woolen buyers in America and abroad worked out with the leading mills the newest ideas in fabrics. Then came months of careful planning on the part of the stylists and designers, months of painstaking needlework on the part of the Adler-Rochester tailors.

And now the great moment is here,---you can walk into our store and select your new spring suit, knowing that twelve months of thoughtful preparation are behind the few minutes you spend in making your choice.
