Eggs Play Large Part at Easter in Serbia

At the breakfast table on Easter Sunday in Serbia young and old are face to face with piles of multi-colored eggs! It is not polite to eat an egg by yourself there. You must give your right-hand or left-hand neighbor the chance of tapping it with his egg, to see which breaks first. If yours breaks first you are bound, according to custom, to hand it over, and try your luck again! This quaint ceremony is not only carried on in the house but at the table. During Easter week no proper Serbian leaves the house without an egg in his pocket, with which to exchange greetings in the street or market place. During and since the war, the eggs were decorated with patriotic mottoes and pictures of the Serbian generals and heroes. The egg-artists indicated the popularity of the soldier represented in the egg-portrait by the length of his mustache! Men pay calls upon their women friends at Eastertide in Serbia, and to each caller a decorated egg is given to take home. Hot are the discussions between housewives who thus provide for their friends, as to the merits of the drawings on the shells.

Of the many holy days in Portugal in the ceremonies of Easter week Good Friday holds a unique place. The early part of the day is passed in service and fasting, but later an image of the "traitor Judas" is carried on a cart through the streets of each town, and a great crowd follows. Then the false apostle is hung upon the church steeple, and next day the effigy is cut down and burned in a huge bonfire. In Mexico, and in most of the South American republics, you find the same customs. Fuses and fire crackers fill the image of Judas, and he is also stuffed with buns, cigarettes and other gifts. At ten at night, when the match is applied, the archtraitor fizzes, fumes and finally explodes, scattering the gifts among the crowd, who scramble wildly for relics.

Ancient Easter Fare

In former times the first dish brought to the table on Easter day in some parts of England was "a red herring riding away on horseback," that is, a fried herring set in the midst of corn sala

See the land, her Easter keeping,
Rises as her Master rose.
Seeds, so long in darkness sleeping,
Burst at last from winter's snows.
Earth with heaven above rejoices.
Fields and gardens hail the spring;
Shaughs and woodlands ring with voices,
While the wild birds build and sing.

You, to whom your Maker granted
Powers to those sweet birds unknown,
Use the craft by God implanted;
Use the reason not your own.
Here, while heaven and earth rejoices,
Each his Easter tribute bring—
Work of fingers, chant of voices,
Like the birds who build and sing.
—Charles Kingsley.

Spinsters Washed Effigy

An exceedingly quaint old Good Friday custom was held up to less than a century ago in the little church of Glentham, Lincolnshire, England. Thither, upon this red-letter day of the year, would seven spinsters—then termed in the bluntly, frank phraseology of the times, "old maids"—resort, each bearing her pitcher of water, brought from Newell well, their joint task being to wash a certain stone effigy of a female placed within the church precincts, for which they were recompensed, somewhat inadequately one would think, by the dole of a shilling. Whom the figure was supposed to represent, or in whose memory it had been reared, history does not record; for the passing years would seem to have stolen her very name from this mute memorial of the past, and only by the unlovely title of "Molly Grime" was she handed down to posterity, and the "washing of Molly Grime" was regarded by at least those seven old Lincolnshire spinsters as the great event, if not of the year, at least of one unforgettable day.

EASTER marks the most important milestone in man's upward progress. It signifies the resuscitation of nature and the perpetuation of the spirit of man. It opens to man a new heaven, and it promises to make for him a new earth. The day appeals to the pietist and the naturalist, the scientist and the man who lives in the realm of the spirit. It rests upon the material universe, and it elevates man toward God.

FIRE FIGHTERS ARE HEROES OF NEW M-G-M PRODUCTION

Dramatic Story, With Thrills And Romance, Woven Against Background Of Fire-Fighters

"The Fire Brigade," coming to the Lyceum Theatre Friday and Saturday of next week, might easily be called a picture of highlights, so full of thrills it is.

This production does for the fireman what "The Big Parade" did for the American soldier, and brings bebore the public in an arresting manner the necessity of fire prevention without at any time becoming a preachment on the subject.

A gripping, dramatic story has been woven against a background of fire and fire-fighters that holds the spectator from beginning to end. The story tells of "Terry O'Neal," descended from a long line of fire-fighters, his initial enthusiasm, his love for the daughter of a wealthy man whom he later discovers to be the head of the whole city government, his disgust at this man's crooked methods, and the consequent quarrel with his sweetheart over her father, his heroism in a spectacular orphange fire caused through the neglect of the politician, and the final reconciliation with the daughter and his later public recognition for his heroism.

The studio had the expert co-operation of the International Order of Fire Engineers in the making of the picture, and the fire scenes were all staged by the Los Angeles Fire Department under the supervision of Fire Chief Halph Scott of that city.

"The Fire Brigade" is the first directorial effort of William Nigh for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and places him in a similar position to that of King Vidor after he had triumphed with "The Big Parade."

Charles Ray is seen in the role of "Terry O'Neil." Noted for his humanness, the actor has excelled himself in the delineation of this character. It is one that allows for considerable comedy, yet depends principally upon drama ofr its appeal.

May McAvoy, is seen opposite Ray as "Helen Corwin," daughter of the politician, and not only has photographed to the finest advantage, but brings a wealth of charm and understanding to her part.

Tom O'Brien, remembered for his role as "Bull" in "The Big Parade," plays Ray's big brother in this picture, and though he dies all too soon in the story, leaves a lasting impression.

Holmes Herbert as the father of the heroine, manages to make himself thoroughly despicable, with his love for his daughter the one redeeming feature.

An elaborate costume ball, photographed in technicolor, brings a surprising note of beauty to the film.
