Each week in government hospitals throughout the country thousands of the small scarlet memorial flowers are being made by America's disabled ex-service men.

THE DAIRY

SOY BEANS PROVE VALUABLE AS FEED

Dairymen are finding that the soy bean plant is a valuable source of feed for dairy cattle, W. B. Nevens, assistant chief of dairy cattle feeding at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, reports. In case of a hay shortage, soy beans produce in one season not only a large yield of hay, but also a feed which is rich in protein and lime, two of the essentials for milk production. The beans and the oil meal produced from them are also valuable concentrated feeds.

Studies of the feeding value of soy bean products for dairy cattle have been under way at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, since 1922. Soy bean straw, the product left after threshing soy beans, when compared with timothy hay, proved to be a relatively poor roughage for growing dairy heifers. About 35 per cent of the straw fed was refused. Choice soy bean hay, on the other hand, proved a very valuable roughage for milk production. From 10 to 15 per cent of the hay in the form of coarse stems was refused. When compared on a pound basis of the hay actually consumed soy bean hay was found equal to alfalfa hay of equal grade.

A close relationship was found between the thickness of planting soy beans and the proportion of the hay refused. The amounts of hay (stems) left uneaten ranged from 120 pounds a ton of hay from a thickly planted plot to 360 pounds for the thinnest planting.

Feeding trials with soy bean oil meal have shown it to be nearly equal to choice cottonseed meal as a protein supplement for milk production.

More than 30 cows are now used in a feeding trial in which a study is being made of different methods of preparing soy bean hay for feeding. The whole hay is fed in comparison with chaffed hay and ground hay.

Dairy Hints

Alfalfa hay and corn silage together supply ideal roughage for dairy cows.

* * *

Calves cannot be grown from birth to maturity on a ration free from roughage.

* * *

Market your milk, butter or cheese to the best advantage. It is part of the dairyman's job to find the best market for his products. There is where the profit comes from.

* * *

If cream or other products are to be sold and a dairy herd maintained for profit, there should be from 10 to 15 dairy cows on the farm to put the enterprise on a business basis.

* * *

Do not mix cooled cream with fresh, warm cream. Stir the cream several times a day to prevent it from sticking to the sides of the can.

* * *

Worn bowls, spindles and bushings and improperly operated cream separators have resulted in heavy losses of cream, according to cow testers.

* * *

Give the cows a practical test to ascertain the amount of butterfat contained in the milk, and then discard any which do not come up to a profitable standard.

The best way to buy a straw hat is to be sure it is a Mullin Straw. It will fit your face.

The circumference of sweat band is enough if you don't care a hang how you look. But you do care.

That's why we have scientifically developed the assortment of hats in the Mullin line so that any face—every face can be fitted.

Long, thin faces can't wear straw hats that were made for round, chubby faces any more than large men can avoid an odd appearance when they wear hats designed for small men.
