No One Immune From Pangs of "Mal-de-Mer"

Doctors Cury and Bohec have an interesting article on seasickness in Esculape (a medical journal). Oddly enough, very few of the ancient writers seems to have concerned themselves with the affliction; neither Plato nor Aristotle makes any allusion to it. On the other hand, the ocean was considered a sovereign panacea for all sorts of ills.

Plutarch, however, mentions seasickness, which he attributes to fear, and it is sufficiently evident that our remote forefathers were not immune. In this connection it may be recalled that, according to Seneca, Cicero, prince of orators, fleeing the wrath of Antony and his wife, Flava, whom he had attacked in his "Philippics," took refuge on board a ship and decided, when the vessel had put to sea, that he would rather surrender to the executioner than endure the torments of seasickness. He was put ashore and assassinated near Formiae.—From Le Matin, Paris. (Translated for the Kansas City Star).

Odd Maze of Words Applied to Costume

Near the close of the Eighteenth century, in France, some mysterious, semi-poetical name was bestowed on every kind of dress fabric, trimming and cut. The following description of the costume of a famous actress-courtesan is an example:

"She was attired in a robe of stifled sighs, adorned with superfluous regrets, the point edged with perfect candor, trimmed with indiscreet complaints. She wore ribbons of marked attentions, and shoes of the color of the queen's hair (Marie Antoinette's) embroidered with diamonds in treacherous stripes. Above her curls of elevated sentiments was a head-dress of certain conquest, trimmed with fickle feathers, while over her shoulders fell an Absalom tress of momentary agitation."

All that reads like gibberish today yet it was perfectly understood by the great ladies of 1709.—Detroit News.

Wanted All the Goodies

Teddy was about to enter his tenth year. His mother told him he might invite his little friends to a birthday party, and she made the necessary preparations. On the important evening they were waiting for the guests. Suddenly the youngster said, "Mother, don't you think it's time to eat the ice cream and cake now?"

"Certainly not, dear," she replied. "We must wait until your little friends are here."

"Well, I'll tell you the truth, mother," Teddy began, "I just thought that for once in my life I'd like to have all the ice cream and cake I wanted, so I guess we'd better begin now, 'cause I didn't invite anybody."—Boston Transcript.

Rockets Travel Far

Many different types of rockets are made. The distance to which they will range and the height to which they will ascend depend upon the type. An ordinary sky-rocket, such as used on the Fourth of July, will probably not ascend more than 500 feet if fired from a vertical position, and will probably not range farther than 1,000 yards if held elevated at an angle of 30 degrees. The highest developed rocket is probably the tracer shell used in artillery. In this the projectile carries a supply of illuminating tracer composition in its base, and the tracer shell has nearly the range of the ordinary projectile, in some types upward of 20,000 yards.

Where Man Is Vain

Among the Kavirondo negroes of Central Africa a man wears as many coils of iron as his arms and legs will hold, and keeps them brightly burnished with oil or fat.

Metal is so fascinating to the men of this tribe that telegraph wires are sometimes torn down to be made into armlets or anklets, or to be twisted in imitation of European travelers.

On festive occasions the numerous coils of iron are specially polished for the occasion. Then the Kavirondo man adds a string of empty cartridges, a piece of chain mail, anklets of bells, and any odd scraps of metal he can find.

Wished They Hadn't

As she tripped blithely across the roadway the celebrated actress noticed an old friend, a playwright, who was heavily bandaged, coming toward her.

"Good gracious!" she exclaimed. "My dear, have you been in an accident?"

Her friend regarded her a moment. "No," he answered; "but you remember that play of mine which came on the other night?"

The other nodded.

"Well, they called for the author at the end and, unfortunately, I didn't realize how much they wanted him."

Hunting Up Father

Gloves, swallow-tail coats and chaperons have practically disappeared from the list of necessities at modern social functions, remarks the Woman's Home Companion, but the host is still extant—"while his wife receives, he mingles with guests, making introductions." If he isn't visible, the best place to look for him is in the attic, or down cellar, or in the garage underneath the car. Or you may catch him going around the corner, headed for the club.

Making Life Interesting

A woman, whose quarrels in the house were complained of by her landlady in a police court, exclaimed: "If I didn't quarrel with my husband he would think I had gone soft."

Solved the Mystery of "Bleeding" Pillar

The following incident is quoted from the report of the Union Kanarese seminary in Tumkur, South India: "In a village five miles away there stands before the temple a tall, slender pillar, down the side of which for some little distance rain has left a course of red rust. The people declare that periodically the pillar bleeds, and there, sure enough, is the thin red line. In some quarters, a few months ago, the fear grew lest the appearance of the blood on the pillar should be a portent of disaster to the state. The six senior students went out to investigate this phenomenon. With great tact they won the confidence of the leading folk of the village so far as to induce them to have a ladder brought and set up against the pillar from the roof of the temple. One of the students mounted the ladder, a somewhat risky proceeding, and climbing to the top of the pillar proved to the people beyond controversy that the bleeding was due to an iron spike in a cup at the top of the shaft. When a safe descent had been effected, the men improved the occasion in apostolic fashion and preached Christ to the crowd that had gathered."

Proper Glasses Only Cure for Astigmatism

We might roughly compare our eyes to the lens of a camera, insomuch as their business is to take the rays of light and focus them properly on our screen of sight.

Now, if the lens is not perfectly true—if, say, it is shaped more like the back of a spoon than like a perfect globe—we shall not get an equal vision. And if one draws two lines crossing at right angles, the person with a spoon-shaped eye will not be able to see the up-and-down line and the sideways line equally clearly.

That is what we call an astigmatic eye, the word really meaning that there is no one particular point of clear and equal focus. In most cases glasses will be needed to correct the fault.

Oriental Tales

Every ancient nation has had its myths and epics of heroes bold. The East has given us many such tales from its imaginative writers. The greatest known collection of these mythical stories is the "Arabian Nights." Of similar character, but less fascinating, is the "Epic of Kings" from the writings of the Persian poet Firdusi, who, at the command of his sovereign, rendered stories of the deeds of Persian kings into verse. There are stories of shahs, beasts, dragons, noble warriors, and kings who reigned a thousand years. The style of the translation is poetical and also biblical; in fact, for narratives of this type, somewhat ponderous and tedious. The stories are hidden beneath a burden of language. However, the matter is delightful and the illustrations, which were furnished by Wilfred Jones, are truly Oriental in brilliance and form.
