Both officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and citizens of Barclay are to be congratulated upon the outcome of the fight to retain the railroad station as a non-agency office. Barclay folk are to be commended for their aggressive and public spirited campaign; and Pennsylvania officials should be given full credit for a desire to serve the public efficiently.

H. W. COLLINGWOOD DIES SUDDENLY

Editor of Rural New Yorker Succumbs To Heart Disease.

Word has been received at Washington College of the sudden death of Mr. H. W. Collingwood, editor of the Rural New Yorker.

Mr. Collingwood was a veteran news editor and also a successful farmer. On his farm in New Jersey he had taken under his care, at different times, twenty or more young men and boys whom he has raised and educated.

Mr. Collingwood is remembered by the students of Washington College for an address that he delivered in Chapel three weeks ago, which was exceedingly interesting and educational. The news of his death comes to his friends at Washington College as a very great shock.

—o—

President Coolidge's stand with respent to the United States Chamber of Commerce's demand for a $400,000,000 tax reduction by the next session of Congress and the uncertain attitude of Republican leaders generally on this important issue indicate that administration leaders have at last recognized either that the country is not as generally prosperous as they have been claiming; or that, if there is general prosperity, they are not at all certain it is going to continue under the policies for which they are responsible.

Commenting on the U. S. Chamber of Commerce's action, the President let it be known that he favors tax reduction, but makes no suggestion as to how or to what extent it should be effected. He also noted that "expenditures were mounting," which is hardly consistent with the claims that have been made for his administration that it was steadily reducing the cost of government. As a matter of fact, as the Secretary of the Treasury's annual report shows, government appropriations have increased progressively every year of the Coolidge administration.

As for the extravagant claims of wide and general prosperity upon which much of the fiction about the Coolidge administration has been built up, every figure bearing upon the point which comes from a reliable quarter bears out the contention Democrats have been making for several years, that while there is a certain degree of prosperity, it is "sootty," is chiefly confined to a huge administration-favored corporations, and has not been enjoyed by the farming classes, the small manufacturers, merchants and working people generally. It is also a fact that banking and business failures have been more numerous during the Harding-Coolidge regimes than ever before in the history of the country, and there is every reason to indicate that commercial casualties, particularly among the small and moderate class traders, will reach a new and appalling high peak during the present year.

GOOD SHOWING AT SWARTHMORE

H. P. Ford, Esq., an alumnus of Washington College, writes as follows of the football game Saturday at Swarthmore:

"An ideal autumn afternoon, last Saturday, greeted the lusty young football warriors of Washington and Swarthmore Colleges as they met in the Swartmore football arena to battle heroically for the honor and prestige of their respective institutions.

"A number of us old Washington grads laid aside our business cares and journeyed out to the beautiful grounds of Swarthmore College, not only hoping to see a fine game of ball but also to grasp the hands of old-time friends and acquaintances in and about Chestertown. In this latter expectation we were grievously disappointed. The old-timers were woefully lacking; they are getting too old, perhaps, to enjoy life as they once did. We quite forgot our disappointment, however, in seeing the unusually attractive young co-eds from the banks of the well-remembered Chester River. It was also pleasant to see other Washington College supporters present, although the number might have been materially increased without diminishing in any great degree the population of Chestertown and vicinity. If the old college is to grow (as it is growing, and we pray will continue) and if the team representing it is to win victories, it must have the moral and personal support of those who should be interested in it. It requires grit, grace nad loyalty of the highest and most worth-while type to back one's team, whether it be successful or not. almost any one can shout for a successful cause, but it requires the noblest sort of heroism to be true and faithful under adverse conditions.

Although defeated, our Washington College team had no cause for shame. It was confronted by a strong and experienced eleven that had recently played against Pennsylvania University. The Swarthmore men were of unusual size. When we consider that on the same afternoon, Dartmouth made twenty points against the strong Harvard team, in one period; and that Villanova made more than that number i none period against Lehigh University and finally defeated it by a score of 54 to 0, it is little wonder that Washington escaped with only a total score of 33 against it; and it is remarkable that it held the strong Swarthmore men scoreless for two out of the four periods. It was a great showing, and the "old grads" felt that our young representatives had done wonderfully well, in view of all the conditions they confronted. We were proud of them.

"Perhaps a mistake has been made in arranging a series of football games with colleges having teams so much stronger than Washington can possibly hope to have at present. The policy has been criticised, but it is no part of our intention to discuss this question here. We only know that our boys did well and deserve only the highest praise for their heroic attempt to give all that was in them to the glory of their college. In this game, they did all that could reasonably be expected of them. In almost any game against a team of their own class they would be almost sure to succeed. Few of us are able to accomplish the impossible."
