THESE WIVES

Virtuous, mildly rebellious wives of Chicopee, Massachussetts, prepared ten commandments for husbands and show that they do not understand the problem of husband or marriage. It is useless to talk about details, including the double standard of morals. The problem is in two words, sympathy and justice. If a man is sympathetic and just, he will try to do what he ought to do. His success will depend on his age and his degree of semi-civilization.

Men, once as imperfect as the higher apes, are slowly improving, and marriage is their training school. Wives know it and prepare their matrimonial decalogues chiefly for amusement. It interests them to think what a husband might be, if he were not what he is.

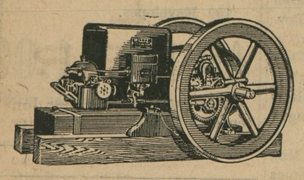

Nearer reality is the "husband calling contest." At the Suffolk, Va., fair prizes were for wives that could call their husbands with a voice endearing and audible from afar. The wife combining endearment with extreme radius was to be crowned queen of the husband callers. Unregenerate husbands will shudder at the thought of that penetrating, endearing call.

Wives have been engaged in that husband-calling contest for 500,000 years, first to get him, then to keep him. Their patience throughout the ages is amazing, the smallness of their reward pathetic.

Stewart-Warner Radio Wins Two Grand Prizes in Italian Contests

In Italy, land of Marconi, inventor of radio's predecessor, the wireless telegraph, an American built receiver, has twice carried off the honors in competition with every leading European and American brand. The Grand Prize at both the Gonzaga and Padova Fairs was awarded to a well-known radio, built in the United States, in a contest judged on the basis of performance and beauty.

An indication of the extreme values in radio, available to American buyers, is the fact that this receiver, manufactured by the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation, of Chicago, sells in the United States for a nominal price, while many of the competitive European makes entered in the contests sell for extremely high prices.

Unquestionably the Americau radio fan is fortunate. In America, the land of free speech and free radio programs a tax on radio sets is unknown. But in many countries across the Atlantic, radio listeners must pay an annual fee to their governments for the support of broadcasting.

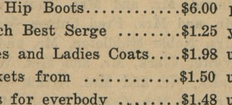

In addition, the United States has not only outdistanced European nations with an overwhelming number of excellent broadcasting stations—but in the production of finer receiving equipment, selling at prices that, to our Continental cousins, would seem ridiculously low.

LONG DISTANCE WAS ONLY 100 MILES IN 1890; AT PRESENT REACHES 7000

Telephone Service Extended to Chicago in 1892; Denver, 1911; San Francisco, 1915; Cuba, 1921, and England and Mexico in 1927

The Pan-American Building at Washington from which President Coolidge opened the new long distance telephone line to Mexico. Insert—W. S. Gifford, president, American Telephone and Telegraph Company; Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general, Pan-American Union; Mexican Ambassador Tellez and others listening in on the line while the President is talking.

At the recent inauguration of long distance service between the United States and Mexico by Presidents Coolidge and Calles, Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, made a surprising statement when he said:

"The inauguration of this service fulfills one of the specific objects for which the American Telephone and Telegraph Company was formed. The charter of the company, granted in 1885, read in part as follows:

"'To connect one or more points in each and every city, town or place in the State of New York with one or more points in each and every other city, town or place in said state, and in each and every other of the United States, and in Canada and Mexico; and each and every of said cities, towns and places is to be connected with each and every other city, town or place in said states and countries and also by cable or other appropriate means with the rest of the known world.'

"The men who prophesied telephone connections with Mexico under the conditions existing at the time the charter was granted were both optimistic and farsighted," Mr. Gifford said to the audience in the Pan-American Building at Washington where the ceremony incident to the establishment of the service to Mexico was held. At the time that charter was granted, long distance in this country was about 100 miles.

"By 1890 long distance was bounded by Boston, Washington and Buffalo. Long distance lines reached Chicago in 1892. Denver was connected with New York and eastern points in 1911 and San Francisco in 1915. Since then two additional transcontinental lines have been built and more recently radio telephone service has been established with Great Britain.

"In inaugurating long distance telephone service between points far apart, distance is not the main criterion," Mr. Gifford said. "What we, in the telephone business, are chiefly interested in is service. Service is not getting one message through under favorable conditions for a record. Service is getting everybody's message at all times and getting them through quickly and effectively and at a reasonable cost—in other words, providing a sure servant for the human intercourse of friendship and commerce. It is this which is the ambition of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to provide between the two countries.

"In the history of telephony, Mexico was first among Spanish speaking countries in the public use of the telephone. Four years after the invention of Alexander Graham Bell, a telephone exchange was being operated in the capital of Mexico. Two years later the Mexican Telephone Company, the predecessor of the Mexican Telephone and Telegraph Company began to operate. It is over the lines of the latter company, which is an associate company of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation that the present messages are being transmitted."

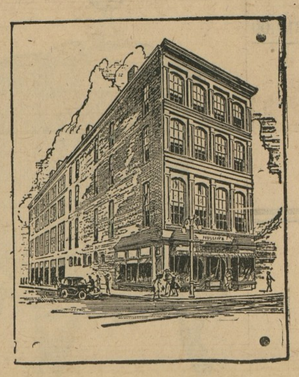

WM. FRAZIER RUSSELL DISCUSSES THE VALUE OF OPPORTUNITY

On Thursday, November 3, Mr. Wm. Frazier Russell, Jr., a prominent Kent County lawyer, spoke to the student body at the chapel exercises.

His subject was based on Opportunity and he developed it very interestingly.

Mr. Russell has had wide and varying experience and by using anecdotes from his own past he secured the undivided attention and interest of his audience.

His talk was morrally helpful and as an example of oratory it ranks among the best heard this year..
