Each pupil represented some profession or trade and worked togther for the good of the community. The program was well carried out. The class was conducted by one of its members, Charlotte Russell, as teacher. Stories were read by the children and were the work of members of the class. The account given by them of their recent visit to Chestertown's Blue Ribbon Bakery was extremely well done.

Parents were invited for the afternoon and a number availed themselves of the opportunity to see the small folks at work. They were served refreshments at the end of the exhibit which closed on a high note of sentiment by the children that they are proud of Chestertown and want to make Chestertown proud of them. The lesson in citizenship and cooperation was well-grounded.
