DUNN LOSES SUIT AGAINST 28 DEFENDANTS

In dismissing the suit of James B. Dunn, race-track man and former owner of a stock farm near Chestertown, Kent county, against S. Scott Beck, former State's Attorney for Kent county, and others, Judge Wm. C. Coleman, in the United States District Court, Saturday reprimanded G. L. Pendleton, Negro lawyer, who was counsel for Dunn.

Judge Coleman accused Pendleton of wasting the time of the court and of not having properly investigated the status of his client's reputed residence.

Dunn alleged in his petition that he was the victim of a conspiracy to dispossess him of his property, including 420 acres of land and improvements in the Seventh district of Kent county. He asked specific damages against some of the twenty-eight defendants mentioned in his suit, and also that forced sales of his land and personalty be set aside. He contended, among other things, that he had been deprived of his right under the Constitution and said he was a citizen of New York.

In deciding the case, Judge Coleman declared he could not find that the complainant had suffered any constitutional deprivation in proceedings in the State courts, and for that reason alone he was disposed to dismiss the complaint. He agreed, however, to allow Dunn to take the stand, at the insistance of the defense, to answer questions relative to his place of residence.

Three documents filed by Dunn in answer to his wife's application for divorce were read. These, it was revealed, set forth that he was a resident of Baltimore. In order to have a standing in the Federal Court in the case at issue, it was necessary for him to be a resident of some other Commonwealth than Maryland.

"The complainant, by his own sworn admissions, has established his residence in this city," Judge Coleman said. "The court dismisses his petition."

"I should like to have it made clear that the court dismisses the petition as against all the defendants," Wm. L. Rawles, attorney for the defendants requested.

"The suit is dismissed in its entirety," Judge Coleman replied.

"I wish to add," Judge Coleman remarked, "that the time of this court is too valuable to be taken up in the manner of this complaint. It was the duty of counsel for the complaint to inquire more carefully into the status of his client's residence before filing the complaint."

Besides Mr. Beck, the defendants included the National Surety Company of New York; Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, Harrison W. Vickers, Sheriff J. Thomas Hadaway, of Kent; W. Mason Shehan, attorney of Easton; Charles C. Wallace, Baltimore attorney; Robert V. Moffett, of Chestertown, magistrate; Federal Land Bank, of Baltimore; Robert Shallcross, Clerk of Court, of Kent county; Charles B. Lord, Clerk of Court, Talbot county, B. Hackett Turner, Clerk of Court, Queen Anne's county; John Hartnett, court stenographer, Chestertown, and Milton L. Cahn, of New York and Louisiana.

In the complaint were references to Dunn's martial troubles. He claimed that his property was tied up by the divorce proceedings in such a way as to allow his creditors to close in and take away his property. He charged collusion on the part of certain court attaches and others in the forced sale and purchase of his live stock and personalty so that he was unable to get control of sufficient cash to defend his interests.

Mr. Shehan was in court with Mr Rawls, and aided i nthe defense. He made a motion to dismiss the complaint and took part in the argument before the court.

Attorneys for the defense expressed the opinion that the action of Judge Coleman would end a case which has been in the courts on the Eastern Shore since 1922.

The Chesapeake Bay Land Association of Betterton has awarded to James T. Ireland, of Easton, a contract to dredge the channel of Still Pond Creek in order to open that body of water as a yacht harbor for the owners of summer homes bordering on the creek.

GIVE TITLES AT COLLEGE PARK

To three rural women of Maryland came the honor Thursday of being the first master farm homemakers ever named in the State.

They are Mrs. Chester H. Hobs. Mount Airy; Mrs. L. A. Sutton, of Chestertown, and Mrs. Annette W. Smith, of Westminster.

The new title was conferred by The Farmer's Wife, a magazine, in cooperation with the home demonstration department of the University of Maryland Extension Service, at special exercises at the annual rural women's short course.

The climax of the ceremony was the awarding of special gold pins. Several hundred farm women from all over the State attended.

Two of Maryland's first master farm homemakers live on their own farms; the other on a rented one. Dairying is an important business on all three farms.

Asked what they would buy with an extra $5 for their kitcehns, the three said, respectively, "a wheeled tray," "a clock and a stool," and "another window."

All three women were found to be good managers of time and money. They have two to three hours' daily leisure, and their extra income, chiefly from chickens and garden, ranges from $350 to $600 a year.

The families vary in size, including from three to seven children, all of whom have had or will have, if possible, college educations. "Bringing up" the children has included definite training in religion, love of county life and business methods.

All three women are active in church, school, farm organizations and other community affairs and all voted at the last national, state and county elections.

MILK FLOWS WHERE ALFALFA GROWS

The Five-County Alfalfa Campaign being conducted in Kent, Queen Anne, Talbot, Caroline and Dorchester counties is one of the most important ones inaugurated by the department of agriculture.

Today, we have in Kent County about 150,000 dairy cattle and only about 1,500 acres of alfalfa, or one acre of alfalfa for ever seven head of dairy animals. We could profitably use an acre of alfalfa for every head of dairy cattle. Alfalfa, up to this number of acres, is one of the best crops a Kent Dairyman can grow.

A goal of 5,000 acres has been set for the 5-County Alfalfa Campaign or 1,000 acres per county. Alfalfa hay contains 11 per cent protein and essential minerals for milk production in the finest available forms. Alfalfa also enriches the soil and builds up the farm fertility. It will also mean more milk at a lower cost of production and much greater profit from the dairy industry in Kent. More money for the farmer is the thing that pays the bills, puts an edge on business in the county, and money in the banks.

The News wishes great success to the farmers in this laudable campaign.

A KENT WAR VETERAN DEAD

On June 17th Colonel Warren Shaw Fisher, age 49 years, formerly of 148 East 46th street, New York City, died at Emergency Hospital, Easton, Md., following an illness of several weeks.

Colonel Fisher was a veteran of the Spanish-American War, the Porto Rico and Philippines' Campaigns, and of the World War. He comes of old revolutionary stock. His great-great-grandfather, John Hart, signed the Declaration of Independence. During the World War Colonel Fisher distinguished himself as designer of the "Mystery Ship" and of a mine sweeper. He was also the founder of the United American War Veterans.

Colonel Fisher is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ruth A. Fisher (nee Wyble and father) Warren T. Fisher, veteran of the Civil War.

FIRE CO. DOES GOOD WORK

The Chestertown Volunteer Fire Co. have been called to two fires this week and each call resulted in fine work accomplished in saving property.

The cow sheds on the farm of the O'Mara Bros., Plum Point, in Worton, were destroyed by fire of unknown origin early Monday night.

Applying the booster system carried on the truck No. 3 the firemen had the fire nearly extinguished when the tenant house, near the sheds, was found to be afire. They shifted the limited supply of water to the dwelling and saved it from destruction. Meanwhile, the flames at the cow shed had gotten a fresh start and the structure destroyed before the firemen could finish their job. There was fodder on top of the sheds and it was in this that the fire originated.

Fire badly damaged the steamboat wharf at the foot of High street here Tuesday afternoon. The wharf is the property of the Pennsylvania Railroad and has not been in use since boat service to Chestertown was discontinued.

The blaze was discovered about 4.30 p. m. by Mrs. W. W. Hubbard, while at her home. She saw smoke pouring out from under the eaves of the office. She gave the alarm thru the telephone exchange.

Two trucks of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company were rushed to the scene and in a short while four streams of water were being pumped on the flames. At first both of the trucks were vumping directly from the river but as the smoke became heavier the truck nearest the burning building pulled out and connected with a fire plug at High and Front streets.

It was a most spectacular fire and scores of persons watched the excellent work of our boys.

Walter T. Pippin, contractor and builder, has been awarded the contract to build an addition to the Grey's Inn farm house of Miller and Howard Strong. Baths, electric lights and other conveniences are to be installed for use of the members of the ducking club which has leased the gunning grounds. Slag for improving the road from the Piney Neck concrete road to the farm gate is also to be furnished by the gunners.
