SATURDAY, JUNE 23, 1928

Foreign tourist traffic moving south into the heart of the Del-Mar-Va Peninsula at the main highway intersection below Dover, checked from 5 p. m. Friday, June 15th, until 5 p. m. Sunday, June 17th, by the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association shows an increase in this season of 81 per cent over the same period last year and 51 per cent over 1926.

The eighth annual championship work boat races, held off Bay Shore Park Saturday under ideal climatic conditions with a clear sky and a stiff northerly north-east breeze, proved the most successful of any of the championship races heretofore. The ninth annual championship, to be held in 1929, was invited to Hampton, Va., but was voted finally to Deals Island.

DIAMOND BACKS RAISED ON SHORE

The raising in captivity of diamond back terrapin in the swamp sections along the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries has passed the experimental stage and is now becoming an established industry.

At one of the largest of the terrapin farms on the Onancock river, near Accomac, more than 3,000 diamond-backs are said to have reached the legal size and to have been shipped to Northern markets during the past season.

The output from this farm would have been much greater had not many terrapin escaped through a hole in the inclosure before it was discovered.

A number of new farms began operating in the tidewater sections of Maryland and Virginia last year and all are said to be proving profitable enterprises.

Most of the farms are practically empty at present excepting for under-sized terrapin and those kept for egg-laying purposes. The terrapin deposits its eggs upon small sand islands usually maintained near the center of the swamp inclosures.

During the 1927-28 season, the market for terrapin from the Eastern Shore farms was depressed a part of the time which flood of Southern terrapin which invaded the Northern cities.

Shipments which competed with the Chesapeake stock came mostly from the Gulf ports, where terrapin are said to be unusually plentiful. Recently one shipment arrived in Maryland, consisting of more than 6,000 terrapin, to be used for canning purposes.

The Southern terrapin is about the same size as the Chesapeake diamond-backs, but are considered to be inferior in quality to the Maryland and Virginia variety.

The average price received for the Chesapeake stock last season was about $2 a pound, or about $8 each for marketable terrapin. At the terrapin farm at Crisfield we saw last week a wonderful sight when over 5,000 diamond back terrapins were seen in the pens. For the seven-inch size they were getting $65 a dozen.

4,700 Mementoes Given Lindbergh

Four thousand and seven hundred gifts have come to Col. Charles A. Lindberg in the year since he flew from New York to Paris.

They range from the Congressional Medal of Honor, highest award of his own nation, through sixty-eight decorations and thirty-one medals from the United States and European and Latin-American lands, to a matador's cloak he brought from Mexico and a pair of aviator's goggles.

For his day-by-day use the colonel has kept only the goggles.

About 850 of the gifts are on display in a temporary museum in St. Louis which sponsored his flight and 3,849 are in the vaults of a St. Louis bank, where he has asked that they be stored for a while.

The Missouri Historical Society, which is in charge of the mementoes, desires to place them in a permanent museum collection if the young flyer will permit it.

Mrs. Nettie H. Beauregard, their custodian, has each gift recorded.

At Lindbergh's specific request every present that has come to him, no matter how trivial, has been kept.

One of the prized trophies is a gold loving-cup given by the London Daily Mail, which sponsored the first trans-Atlantic flight by Alcock and Brown.

Near it are two old silver spheres valued at $14,000. Of little intrinsic worth, but more precious historically than gold or silver, are the water canteen and the condensing flask carried by Lindbergh to Paris in his Spirit of St. Louis.

Medals, a watch, cuff links and other trophies presented on his Latin-American tour form a group almost as large and with almost as much treasure as that of his trans-Atlantic flight.

The matador's cloak and a hat of green silk, with gold thread and spangles, a flag, bowls and loving cups almost without number form another group.

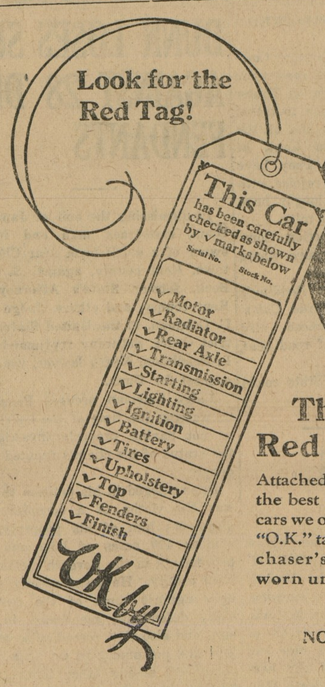

The regular meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company will be held at the Fire House on Monday, June 25th at 7 p. m.

(Hall) Adams, has without any just cause or reason abandoned him, and has declared her intention to live with him no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconcillation.

3. That your Orator and the said Defendant, Ruth L. (Hall) Adams, had two children born to them as a result of said marriage, to wit: Roland Hall Adams, who at the time of the filing of this Bill of Complaint is 17 years of age, and Morris M. Adams, who at the time of filing this Bill of Complaint is 19 years of age, all residing with their mother, Ruth L. (Hall) Adams, somewhere within the State of Oklahoma.

4. That the Defendant, Ruth L. (Hall) Adams is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, whose exact whereabouts is unknown to your Orator.

5. That your Orator is a resident of the State of Maryland, where he has lived for two years previous to the filing of this Bill of Complaint, and is now residing at No. 195 Cross Street, Chestertown, Kent County, Maryland.

It is thereupon, this 13th day of June, 1928, ordered by the Circuit Court for Kent County, in Equity, that the Plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Kent County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 16th day of July next, give notice to said Ruth L. (Hall) Adams, non-resident defendant, warning her to appear in this Court in person, or by Solicitor, on or before the 30th day of July next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.
