THE SUNDAY SCHOOL PROBLEM

As the Sunday Schools of the land are getting in action following a period of vacation and desultory attendance, those who bear the burden of religious education of youth are confronted by a real problem. Young people do not go to Sunday School as they did in former generations and the reason for this would be a solution of the problem.

Time was when every child in every community dersesd in his best on Sunday and started off to the church school, fortified with his lesson learned during the week. He memorized the golden text and, likely as not, a considerable number of verses from the Bible. A wholesome taste for Bibical literature and a facility quotation were usually imparted in the Sunday School.

But times have changed. A college professor recently discovered that his class in English literature could not identify 20 per cent of the Bibical allusions to be found in a selected group of Tennyson's poems. Familiarity with the Bible and attendance upon Sunday School are marked by the same ratio of decline.

It is not the Sunday School alone and the manner of conducting it that is responsible for these changes and conditions. Modern family life is the greatest agency in the destruction of interest in the religious education among our youth. In all well ordered families there was some form of religious observation in the manner of family prayer, at which the entire household was assembled and the thoughts of old and young were directed to spiritual things. This wholesome custom is not found at the present time even in the families of our religious teachers.

In the old fashion Sunday School there were catachisms to be studied, which instilled in the minds of youth a wholesome ideal of life and of ones obligations to God and fellowmen. There were certain passages of scripture which were memorized and often became precepts for the guidance of after life. These helpful adjuncts have been obliterated almost entirely from the teachings of modern Sunday School, with great detriment to their effect upon the young people.

There is no doubt that the contrast between the efficency of public schools and the haphazard methods that obtain in fany Sunday Schools detract from the interest of pupils. The child observes this disparity even though he may not analyze it. Fortunately religious educators are beginning to understand these weaknesses and are formulating plans to combat them. A period of transition is drawing in the Sunday Schools and the methods of religious education. There can be no doubt in any rational mind that religious education is every bit as fundamental to the welfare and happiness of the community as secular education. It must not decline in either favor or usefulness and it is a stigma upon the good citizenship of any community that it should even lag behind.

TALBOT WOMAN WILL BE GRANGE-BUREAU HOSTESS

Mrs. Isaac Dixon, of Baltimore and Kent county, will be hostess to the Grange and Farm Bureau on October 30 next with an all-day picnic at her country place in Talbot. Mrs. Dixon claims to be a dirt farmer, taking an active interest in agriculture.

Last year Mrs. Dixon gave a picnic and supplied the visitors with an oyster roast, sandwiches and coffee. She expects to eclipse last year's affair. Prominent speakers will address the gathering on agricultural topics. A play will be presented and other attractive features are to be provided.

Residents from Queen Anne's, Caroline, Dorchester and Talbot counties are to be present.
