LOCAL NOTES.....

Construction work has started on the fur farm in the Double Creek district bordering the Chester river Muskrats will be raised. Already 100 pens have been built. The animals will be raised for stock purposes. The farm is owned by Philadelphia interests.

A recent public oyster supper in a certain section of Talbot county served chicken salad that had been mixed in an aluminum bowl. It poisoned about forty persons.—Star-Democrat.

The Talbot Commissioners last week unloaded at Cordova a car of slag and there after a car load every week for the use of those roads without cost to the county. This opportunity to get slag will be greatly appreciated by many farmers in that section. Three loads have been ordered by the Road Engiener for use on Miles River Neck roads and, this is a beginning of much more which will be put on roads in the Neck as soon as the first lot is disposed of.

Fearing that their project to have the Road Commission of Kent County, Md., connect a modern concrete highway with the fine piece of concrete highway that was laid to the line of that state at the Coldwell two years ago by the State of Delaware, and at that time looked very likely to be a reality in a biref time, is now being subordinated for other plans of the County Commissioners. Residents along the route are again making efforts to finish this project as was first planned and are circulating more petitions to present to the Commissioners within a short time. The Maryland residents are claiming that the dirt roads from Golt likewise from Sassafras to Smyrna, are impassable in winter and as rough as can be found anywhere in the summer months.

Lakeside Mill, located about one mile northof Townsend was sold at public auction on Saturday afternoon to E. V. Atwell, a real estate dealer, of Wilmington for $11,600. This property has an ideal location and was desired by several business men who believe it should have a great future, in both the milling business and the pond as a fine place for the hiring of boats to fishing parties. Mr. Atwell bought the property for a client. The sale was held by James W. Lattamus, attorney, for Mrs. Zaidee Beardsley Wiggin, administratrix of George H. Wiggin, deceased, under an order of the Orphans' Court. The property also includes a mile-long lake, stocked with game fish, grist mill, a modern home and about four acres of land.

The fourth annual training school, which is under the direction of a local board of managers, of which the Rev. Wilbur F. Corkran, D. D,, pastor of the M. E. Church is chairman, and the Board of Religious Education of the M. E. Church, began in the M. E. Church here on Tuesday evening, and continues for six Tuesday evenings until December 11. The subjects offered in the courses for which classes were organized are: "The Old Testament," "The Message and program of the Christian Religion," "A Study of Early Childhood," "Adolescent Administration," "Training in Worship and the Devotional Life." Classes meet at 7 p. m. and three is no charge for the various courses except a nominal registration fee of $1.00.

That Queen Anne's County turkey farmers are destined to reap rich harvests was fully demonstrated when Mrs. C. Tilghman Bishop, of "Wyoming-on-Wye," near Carmichael, sold sixty-two squabs, for which she received $440.00. The turkeys were marketed alive at 50 cents a pound. Mrs. Bishop has probably the finest flock of turkeys in that county, and has been able to raise to marketable age, two hundred and fifty. Last week she sold thirty-two hens and thirty gobblers which averaged $7.96 each, and has one hundred and eighty-eight that will be marketed later in the fall, and for Christmas. Mrs. Bishop raised the two hundred and fifty birds from ten hens.

A turkey supper will be served in Emmanuel P. E. Parish House, Chestertown, on Thursday, Nov. 22.

Better Forestry To Be Shown By Woodland Improvement Contests.

Several demonstrations, where action will be substituted for ringside seats and where good judgment in action will be rewarded with useful and appropriate prizes, are to be conducted in the county later this fall, the county agricultural agent, H. B. Derrick, announces.

Most farm woodlands are really in need of some cutting, and if this cutting is made along conservative lines, the county agent points out, their growth will be stimulated and the quality of the whole woodland will be improved. Fully 60 per cent of the woodlands in Kent county fall within this class.

Further announcements concerning these contests are to be made shortly by the County Agent, Mr. Derrick. Any farmers interested in this work should get in touch with his office within the next week or two.

"In order to get across the 'why' and the 'how' of forestry improvements most effectively, and to add more immediate interests to the the work, all forestry demonstrations this fall are to be conducted on the basis of contests,"

HATCHING CHICKS

Hatching of chicks in Egypt has been conducted on a commercial basis for so many years that hens there have completely abandoned the idea of wanting to sit on eggs, we are told. Whether or not hens in this country will ever reach that stage is hard to say, but certain it is that more and more farms each year are being stocked with chicks which first saw the light of day in an incubator.

Fifty years ago, hens did most of the hatching of chicks in this country. Thirty-four years ago the first shipment of baby chicks was made, and the hatchery industry became a reality. In the years since then, there have sprung up about 10,000 hatcheries throughout the United States, selling annually a total of about 500,000,000 chicks. Although poultry raisers take many of these chicks, the larger part of them go to farms, because the farmer is finding it a far more economical, more convenient and a much safer plan to purchase his chicks already hatched, than to try to hatch them himself.

The hatchery, with skilled men in charge, turns out thousands of chicks at one time. By this use of the mass production idea, the cost of chicks is lowered. In addition, because the reliable hatcheryman uses the utmost care in breeding, the quality of the farm flocks is being raised to a place where the farmer may expect to reap a handsome profit.

In order to further this idea, and to insure better quality in chicks, reliable hatcherymen throughtout the nation recently combined into an organization to promote better relations between hatcherymen and farmers. These hatcheries, operating under the slogan, "Hatchery Chicks for Greater Profits," are pledged to produce better quality chicks, and to use only sound business methods into their dealings with customers.
