

Kitten Skookum as Cupid

By FREDERICK HART

"MEOW!" The wall of a cat is no uncommon thing in New York, and Hunter did not think anything about this particular outburst; but as it repeated itself he was struck with the plainness of the voice. "Kitten in trouble," thought Edward Hunter, and looked about to find the cause of the noise.

"Me-e-ow!" about it this time. A youth of the next breed had undoubtedly got itself into a scrape and was bewailing the fact. Interested, Hunter continued to search with his eyes. A third repetition of the heartbroken mewling caused him to raise his eyes heavenward, and at last he saw the kitten. It was clinging precariously to the cross-arm at the top of a lamp post.

Hunter wondered how the little thing had managed to perch itself so high. But even as he wondered, the kitten, with a desperate look in its eye, gathered its small self into a furry bundle and launched itself into the air, apparently trusting to the fate that watches over little cats for a safe landing.

It jumped straight at Hunter, and he, although surprised, managed to catch it and get it into a safe position in his arms. "You poor little cuss," he said. "Out all night, I'll bet, and tired most of the time. Wonder who you are? You're no common cat, that's sure." At Hunter's bachelor apartment the kitten proceeded to put itself in deadly and immediate peril of acute indigestion by consuming the greater part of a half-pint of milk at record-breaking speed.

Hunter rescued the inkwell just in time, and unceremoniously bundled pussy into a light basket. Then the two set out for Morristown. No. 34 Ralston place proved to be an attractive house set in the midst of a green, tree-shaded lawn. He walked up the path and rang the bell. A neat, white-capped maid answered his ring, and he was soon in the presence of his imagined "old maid." His expectations were dashed, however, for the owner of the stray, when she entered the room, caused him to spring to his feet with a flush on his face.

"No. 34 Ralston place, Morristown," he said. "It must be a pet pussy. I greatly fear you and I are going to part company before the sun sets. I'd like to keep you, but you're probably causing some old maid a succession of heart attacks." He hustled himself about the room for awhile; then, as the hour drew on toward noon, he went out, had lunch at his club and returned to find the kitten very much awake and amusing itself by experimenting with the movables on his table, most of which lay scattered on the floor.

Bad Spots in Oceans

Probably the roughest bodies of water in the world are the bay of Biscay and the waters immediately surrounding Cape Horn. Some of the roughest and highest breakers are found off the coast of Guinea.

Songs of Satan

The philosophy of the Salvation Army is never to hesitate to adopt the airs of ribald songs for its choruses, on the theory that the devil shouldn't have all the good tunes.—Woman's Home Companion.

Vitamines

Vitamines are food substances which are to the human body what sparks are to the automobile. They are found in the natural foods. Foods highest in vitamins are milk, butter, eggs, calves' liver, vegetables, whole grain cereal and fruit.

Young Men's Real Needs

It is no book learning young men need, nor instruction about this and that, but a stiffening of the vertebrae which will cause them to be loyal to a trust, to get promptly, concentrate their energies, do a thing—"carry a message to Garcia."—Hubbard.

Short and Sweet

Hostess (to star wireless announcer)—Every one here knows your voice so well over the ether; I'm sure they'd just love to hear you speaking in the flesh. Just say something short, such as "Good night, everybody, good night!"—The Humorist.

Lost in Oblivion

Once upon a time a man convinced his small son that algebra would fit him for something big in later life, but his name is forgotten.—Detroit News.

Treachery Cheaply Bought

The 30 pieces of silver for which Judas betrayed Jesus Christ in our money would be about 25¢.

Fast Day at the Zoo

All carnivorous animals kept in captivity, such as lions and tigers, must fast one day out of seven if they are to remain in good health.

In Children's Room

Back a piece of denim in your little boy's room. On this they may sometimes make in school that all boys are so proud of.

One Last Hope

"I've got one advantage over you still," said the horse as he looked at the automobile that was sharing the barn. "When I'm worn out I can be worked up into running beef and gundrops, and you can't."
