LOCAL NOTES.....

A Fashion Show will be held Tuesday evening in the assembly hall of the Chestertown elementary school. The show will be under the direction of the Triangle Club of Christ M. P. Church, and will be conducted by the Hutzler Brothers, of Baltimore.

Though local farmers are disappointed that the reduced railroad rates for cattle feed will continue only until the last of this month, a saving has been recorded in foodstuffs and about fifty carloads have been ordered since the reduction went into effect. J. D. McVean, county agricultural agent, is urging farmers to order more shipments before the time limit is up.

Marx Bros. are at the New Lyceum at this afternoon matinee and tonight in "Animal Crackers."

H. Stocketon Startt, buyer for Northern city markets, advertises to turkey growers of the county that he will purchase seven tons of turkeys delivered at his home until Tuesday, November 25. Mr. Startt will accept both live and dressed stock, and specifies that turkey hens must weigh from 10 pounds up while Toms must weight from 14 pounds up. Thin stock will not be accepted at any price. It is not believed that the price will go far beyond 31 cents a pound live weight or 38 or 40 cents a pound dressed. Few if any turkeys have been offered in Chestertown markets, but the ruling price for severalweeks here has been 31 cents a pound live weight. Some of the growers on the Shore are selling tail and wing feathers at a fair profit for brush making, while body feathers are being bagged and sold for making feather beds.

The Swan Creek Women's Club entertained the Fairlee Women's Club at the home of Mrs. Otto Lassen Wednesday Nov. 19, 1930. Miss Helen Schellinger demonstrated the art of custard making. P. Dean, Louis Knox, William K. Perrin, Jr., Virgil B. Bishop, Albert E. Baker, Archibald P. Orme, Walter S. Karfgin, Joseph Gringhurst, Jr., and W. Joseph Thompson, J. Edward Fitzgerald will be initiated later, it was announced.

According to figures submitted by Dr. William R. Howell, registrar of Washington College, the total enrollment of students on November 1 was 251. The registration by classes is: Seniors, 43; Juniors, 53;; Sophomores 75; Freshman, 80, and special students, one. Notwithstanding the serious financial effects of the drought on the farmers of the Eastern Shore, the territory from which the college draws a large part of its enrollment, this year's total is but 11 short of last year's total of 262, and is one more than the limit of 250 set by the Board of Visitors and Governors because of congested dormitory accommodations.

A marriage license was granted in Baltimore last Wednesday to Miss Dorothy B. Pennington, of Chestertown, and William T. Eckenrode, of Westminster.

Capt. J. W. Blunt has been made one of the keepers of Georgetown bridge and removed to Galena this week.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Chestetrown Fire Co. served a splendid supper Thursday evening to several hundred persons.

Announcement has been made by Washington College authorities that the Carnegie Fund of New York, has donated $150 to buy pictures for use in its art appreciation course. Part of this amount has already been spent for prints of several famous pictures which have been placed on the walls of college buildings.

In order to wipe out an infectious disease which has made its appearance in Kennedyville and Galena schools Miss Fannie Beckman, county health nurse, and Dr. R. G. Ceachley, county health officer, have excluded infected pupils from the school has been reported. Chickenpox has been reorted from the Cliffs school and diptheria toxin anti-toxin has been administered to fifty pupils of Galena school.

Sunday Afternoon Musical Program

The first of the 1930-1931 series of programs by the combined musical clubs of Washington College will be given in William Smith Hall, Sunday afternoon, November 23rd, at 3.30.

Each college year the musical organizations are reorganized with a different membership, due to the loss of members by graduation, the new members being recruited from the freshmen class and transfer students. Both organizations are well pleased with the new members, who have shown talent and promise that forecasts a successful year. This program should measure up to the program given by both musical organizations other years.

To this program the friends of the college are cordially invited. The program for Sunday at 3.30 P. M. follows:

1. Overture, "Fair Maid of Perth," Widdel
   Orchestra
2. (a) "Simple Aveu," Thome
   (b) "Consolation," Mendelssohn-Bartholdy

In spite of new locks placed on all doors of the poultry house of the Ricketts family near Elkton, thieves broke in and hauled off twenty Plymouth Rock poullets. Two boards were removed from the hen house for entrance. The same night, John P. Meredith, tenant on the Gilpin Manor Farm, lost three loads of corn from a field. A week or two ago several large cans of milk were stolen from the same farm.

TYPHOID FATAL TO THIRD IN FAMILY

The fourth member of one family to be stricken with typhoid fever with in a month and the third to die, Marie McKenney, eight years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McKenney, of this town, died early Sunday from heart trouble superinduced by typhoid from which she was apparently recovering.

Her six-year-old brother, John McKenney, Jr., is recovering from the same disease. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning from Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church with interment in Chester Cemetery.

CITY MARKETS BEGIN INQUIRIES FOR TURKEYS

On Thursday of this week two telegrams werereceived by the Turkey Growers Association from New York houses inquiring for shipments of live birds. Prices were quoted and although not satisfactory to Kent shippers the trend showed an upward turn and the members are holding on in the hope that colder weather and a demand for high grade birds will justify their delay in selling.

One commission house asked for a truck load of fancy birds weighing from eight to ten pounds for hens and from ten to fifteen pounds for toms. They were advised by the Association that Kent's birds, due to heavy feeding and plenty of milk, ranged for the Thanksgiving market at from eleven to fourteen pounds for fancy hens and from sixteen to twenty-five pounds for fancy toms.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Christ M. P. Church held a delightful Thank-offering meeting Monday evening. Over $65 was raised by this plan.

AN ENJOYABLE EVENING

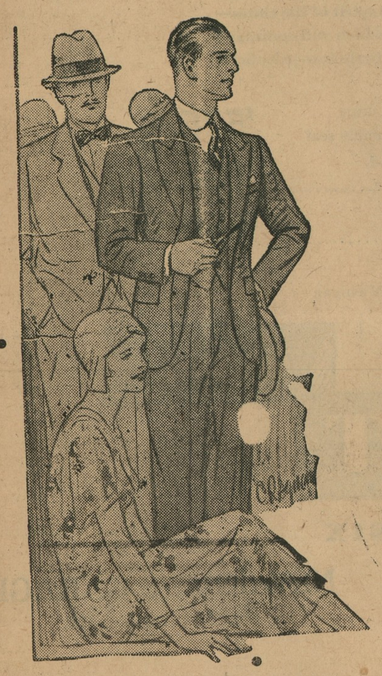

It is always a pleasure to greet those whose presence recalls days when life was bright with glowing visions of the future and hope pictured for us only sunny destinies. Such an occasion came to some of us fortunate ones who had the privilege of attending a delightful reunion of former Washington College students on Friday evening, November 14th, when the Philadelphia Chapter of the Washington College Alumni Association held its tenth annual banquet in the fashionable Hotel Pennsylvania, West Philadelphia, a popular rendezvous of the students of the University of Pennsylvania.

After a bountiful repast, President Titsworth was introduced, and gave a very encouraging report of the program of the college. Genial Dean Jones, Mrs. Titsworth and Marion deK. Smith were also present from Chestertown. A number of former classes were represented, the oldest being that of '76. The Board of Visitors was represented by John I Coulbourn, always foremost in things that make for the progress of the college, and by Miss Burchinal, a valued Philadelphia educator.

There were many pleasant reminiscences of years spent on the old college hill, and all had kindly memories of the town and its friendly people. Regret was expressed by some that the old wooden bridge across Chester River, about which they retain tender recollections of summer evening walks, is now, or soon will be, a thing of the past. It has served its day and generation well.

It is a very real satisfaction to past and present students of the college to know that it has so able an executive at its head as Dr. Titsworth.

Dr. Carl D. Miller, until recently professor of physics in Washington College and nationally known expert on oils and oil machinery, suffered slight injuries when his automobile crashed into a telephone pole near Cecilton, Md., and broke the pole off near the ground. The car was badly damaged. He was not seriously hurt, however, and proceeded on his way to Baltimore, where he was bound, by rail.

STEAMBOAT'N' DAYS

BY

JOHN H. K. SHANNAHAN

THIS new book, just published, tells the fascinating story of the coming of the steamboat to the Chesapeake!

It tells about Tidewater Maryland in the late '80's, when buggy rides still had their thrill and a trip to Balt'more on the B. S. Ford was an event of tremendous importance; when the glories of the Maltby House or the Carrollton met the wondering eyes of the lad from the counties.

[You'll be taken back to those days—the "good old days" of traveling minstrels, patent medicine men, the mustache cup and the family album, by reading Mr. Shannahan's book.]

"Steamboat'n' Days" is illustrated with many photographs, pictures of early "Steamboat'n' pioneers, reproductions of early advertisements and tickets of the first lines. Frontispiece, a reproduction in colors of a typical Chesapeake steamboat.

A novelette has also been made part of the volume. It is "The Hammond Lot," an Eastern Shore romance, of a little later period but laid among similar scenes.

Price $2.00 — order through your newsdealer, or direct from the publishers.

A Special De Luxe Edition, limited to 300 copies, is available at $5.00, from the publishers only.
