This has been "Fire Prevention Week" all over the country. The Chestertown Volunteer Company has designated a committee to inspect all business places here and suggest any changes that they deem needed.

A stitch in time saves nine, so many precautions taken at this time avert ninety and nine in the immediate future. So it behooves everybody to lend his co-operation in the "Fire Week" movement. It is as important to fight fire before it starts as afterwards. We are informed that the losses from fire may be reduced more than 70 per cent if every householder does his part in aiding in the prevention work.

A telegram from Harrington, Del., says: A protest meeting was held in the several churches of this town Sunday morning in reference to the operation of the miniature golf links on Sunday. Harrington has two golf courses, one operated by Jehu Camper along the State Highway, and the other operated closer in town on the Boulevard by Hall and Morris. It is planned to arrange a meeting of the owners with the committee of the churches to request them to close on Sunday. If the owners do not agree to close down the committee then propose to start legal action to compel them to close.

VALUABLE GIFTS OF COLLEGE LIBRARY

The library at Washington College has recently received some valuable gifts.

Herbert Hartman, of Chestertown, has contributed many back numbers of The National Geographic Magazine from 1912 to 1929. This set admirably fills in a big gap among the library's volumes of magazines of value. These issues of the National Georgraphic can hardly be secured in the open market for love or money.

Another generous gift was that of Andrew Jackson Foble, of Cambridge, who has within the past few days sent Washington College a large portion of his small, but carfully selected, library. Among other documents and volumes of value is a description by the famous writer, Raymond Taylor, of a trip down the Eastern Shore in 1871, several volumes on Masonry, particularly the history of the Order in Maryland, and a priceless volume on Masonry written by Dr. William Smith, founder and first president of the College. For this volume Mr. Foble was offered and refused $500.

HEALEY'S CAR IS RUNAWAY

Thomas F. Healey, local attorney, visiting his relatives and friends in the old home town, Waterbury, Conn., had an unusual experience with his car. After he had parked it on a hill in Waterbury, it got away, running into a glass window, before its career was ended.

Mr. Healey reported to police that after he had parked his car and gone a few steps away, the machine began to roll and gained such momentum that it was impossible for him to catch it. When Mr. Healey finally caught up with the car it was resting in the embrace of the plate window of a carpenter and shoe shop.

William Holding, aged forty-five years, of Galena, arrested by Highway Policeman King on South Market street, Wilmington, Tuesday, on a charge of operating an automobile recklessly, was fined $200 when arranged before Magistrate Haley, and in default was committed to the New Castle County Workhouse for a period of sixty days.

An oilburning furnace is being installed in the firehouse of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company here. The work is being done by W. H. Thawley, local heating apparatus contractor and plumber.
