DR. TITSWORTH NOW ABROAD

In a communication to this paper today Dr. Paul E. Titsworth, president of Washington College, states that he and a party of students of post-war European social and economic conditions, whom he is conducting on a seven weeks' tour of foreign countries, have escaped the Italian earthquakes and are now in the south of France. They are, however, enroute to Italy in spite of the danger of renewed earth tremors.

Myron Herrick, war-time American ambasador to France is said to be the most popular man of the 20th century in that country and the American influence in France is in evidence on every hand, according to the Eastern Shore college head who in the first of a series of articles for this paper declares that monuments to Washington, Franklin and other eminent Americas and to the American doughboy and the impressive number of streets and squares bearing American names attest this fact, There is also apparent, states the Chestertown educator, a remarkable business penetration of France by America. Progress made along this line has shown a notable increase since 1927 and in addition to many staple American products, long known to the French, the public is becoming accustomed to American advertising methods which are urging the use of American pencils, swimming suits, paint, collars, vacuum cleaners and refrigerators, to name some of the domestic products on sale abroad. And though it is broadly intimated on the other side of the Atlantic that the new American tariff may arrest this peaceful invasion of France by America the work of advertising propaganda still goes on.

The influence of the automobile is also being felt on every hand and especially in therural districts business is being brought to the roadside by the motor car. Under the influence of rapid transit over the countryside underpasses are being built under trunk boulevards and railroads while ancient routes of travel are being widened and improved to make way for the motor. Workmen are busy turning 15-foot highways into 30-foot thoroughfares.

At the same time a stream of American gold is being poured into French coffers and next to the French themselves there appear to be more Americans in that country than any other nationality while the "American" language is heard everywhere. Last year's reciepts from tourists travel in la belle France, says Dr. Titsworth, amounted to $500,000,000 of which this country contributed about one-half. In one day alone this summer 5,000 American tourists landed at Cherbourg.

Almost freezing temperaturesgreeted the party on their arrival in Paris and the residents of the French capital, along with the travelers, are wearing top coats and sleeping under blankets!

The party being directed by the Delmarva savant not only saw fifty-one gold star mothers from this country being conducted through the Louvre art gallery in Paris but also saw the new American ambassadar, former Senator Walter Edge, of New Jersey. This is President Titsworth's seventh trip to Europe.

DROPPED DEAD ON ROAD

Thomas James, for a number of years foreman of the Murphy and Hayes saw mill, near Centreville dropped dead, while on his way from Centreville to the mill to work. James had stopped into the store of Thomas F. Shortall, en route to the saw mill, and was sitting on a counter conversing with several customers, when he suddenly fell to the floor. Dr. William Henry Fisher, of Centreville, was called and gave the cause of death as heart trouble.

He formerly lived at Harrington, where he was employed. The body was removed to the undertaking establishment of Barton Brothers Centreville. Mr. James i ssurvived by his wife, and one son, Billy James.

At the time of Mr. James death Mrs. James and their son were visiting relatives in Harrington.

It was right after the Wall Street crash. Broker Beeswax was waked in the middle of the night by a burglar. "What are you doing in my room?" inquired Beeswax.

"I'm looking for money!" growled the burglar.

"Well, wait till I get out of bed," replied Beeswax, "and I'll help you look."

A great source of true happiness is found in unselfish service.

Dusty Rhoades, footsore and weary, asked Farmer Corninbloom how far it was to the next town, and was told that there was a milestone right around the corner.

"But I can't read," said dusty Rhoades."

"Well, that'll just suit you grand," replied Corninbloom, "'cause there ain't nothin' on the stone, anyway."
