The purse netters say there seem to be plenty of fish but they do not come within reach. One crew did succeed in catching five tons recently.

Miss Thelma Downey has returned to Maryland General Hospital where she will enter a three months course at Shepherd and Pratt Hospital for the insane.

Crabbers are reaping benelts from one of the most unprecedented runs of hard crabs ever known.

Thomas Edwards suffered from sun stroke or heat prostration while crabbing last Thursday week was revived after two hours of care by friends and is all right again.

It is said that crabbers are netting as much as from $80 to $120 per week from the industry. Many of the Rock Hall and Piney Neck crabbers have moved their equipment up the Chester river opposite Quaker Neck wharf, where as many as eight long trot lines have been placed side by side with only sufficient space to allow the motor boats by which the lines are worked to pass, and the crabbers are catching crabs as fast as they can dip them in nets. Because of the unusually hot weather thousands of crabs are shedding in deep water, making it difficult for the soft crabbers to make much of a catch.

Walter Scoone and Co., and other dealers are doing a big business at the county wharf and fishermen are loud in praise of the Commissioners for having constructed the wharf.
