KENT NEWS SALE

The Kent News with all equipment was sold at public sale Tuesday and repurchased by the former owners, Fred. G. and Wm. B. Usilton. This property was sold in 1927 to the Eastern Shore Newspaper Corporation, and a chain of eight papers formed. The venture did not prove a success so that a formal sale was made so as to relieve the present owners of any liabilities incurred by the corporation.

The Kent News is 90 years old this month and the present editors hope to continue the paper on its progressive career. We appreciate the patronage of our ever widening circle of friends and trust to merit in some degree your continued esteem.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the general alumni association of Washington College — held here Monday and presided over by Emmitt F. Hitch, of Wilmington, president of the association, nominations were made for four vacancies to be filled on the Board of Governors of the college, to be filled by election. Ballots will be cast by alumni of the college after blanks have been sent out by Dean J. S. William Jones, secretary of the association.

Those attending the meeting and making the selections were, besides the president and secretary, Wade G. Bounds, of Baltimore, vice president, and William J. Bratten, of Philadelphia. The following nominations were made: Philadelphia district, John I. Coulbourn, of Philadelphia; Wicomico district, F. L. Wailes, of Salisbury; Somerset county district, William B. Spiva, Princess Anne, and Worcester county district, William D. Corddry, Snow Hill. The result of the balloting will be made known on June 6.

There are 25 members of the governing board, twelve of whom are appointed by Governor Ritchie and the remainder elected by the alumni.

KENT COUNT... NATURE'S RICHES.

Kent County, Md., has just completed a million dollar secondary road program. In celebration of the event an appropriate program, centering about Chestertown, and sponsored by the Kent County Chamber of Commerce will be staged on Monday, May 26. Realizing that what has been accomplished is an achievement, it is proposed to give residents and all others who are interested an opportunity to see what has been done and measure its worth. A tour of inspection is included in the program. Governor Albert C. Ritche, who has been enthusiastically back of the project, will be the guest of honor and the chief speaker.

These new roads are nine feet wide and are substantial, being built of concrete. In their construction the authorities believe they have solved the lateral road problem. As a result, it is now figured that 62 per cent of the highway mileage in the county is improved. The new roads have not only connected all of the major towns and most of the other settlements with each other and with the peninsula highway system, but have also done much to place the farmer, no matter where he may be, in touch with his market.

This, after all, is the matter of chief importance in rural road planning. The farmer has, unfortunately, been left out of the picture in some of the sparsely settled States. Not so in Kent County, or, for that matter, in hardly any portion of the Delmarva Peninsula. There are few counties, however, that seem to have done the job quite as thoroughly as has Kent, where the same consideration is shown the agriculturist and the city and town dweller.

Kent, olready rich in nature's gift's has, through its road work and other public undertakings, enhanced these riches. Among other assets it has more than 200 miles of water front, while its land and water abound in wild fowl, fish, crabs and oysters. The county comprises a rich farming section, in which tomatoes, asparagus, wheat and fruit thrive, while there are admirable poultry raising facilities.

Kent County is awake to the interests of its people. It has excellent educational facilities, Washington College, founded in 1782, located in Chestertown, is the alma mater of many men prominent in the business world. There is adequate fire protection and health precaution. Now, with all of these fine new roads, Kent acquires additional laurels.—Every Evening, May 5, 1930.

The Modern Funeral

The methods and systems in vogue a few years ago, and still adhered to by many, are no longer applicable. In this age and generation a better understanding of the duties of the funeral director has changed the old order. One of the most difficult problems confronting the modern funeral director will be solved when the public realizes that SERVICE is the principal, and in fact, only commodity which we have to offer.

The casket and funeral appurtenances are negligible, or practically so, requiring little or no expense and, in the matter of expense, consist only with the costs of production.

Service is the main consideration—the care and disposition of the body of the one that has passed on. Knowledge and ability and a readiness to relieve the burden of those who are left to mourn.
