BREEDER SELECTS TRADE NAME

John Carvel Sutton, whose herd of purebred Holstein dairy cattle is well known in Kennedyville, Md., has recently chosen a trade mark name to identify his herd. according to an announcement made by the Holstein-Freisan Association of America which registered the name for the breeder. The name chosen as a part of the name of each individual animal in the herd is, "Jocasu."

All registered Holsteins have a name and number, the name usually indicating the ancestral blood lines.

This prefix trade mark will be used by the breeder as a further means of identifying individual animals by indicating the farm where the animal was bred. More than 8708 of these trade mark names are now in regular use by Holstein breeders.

Mother's Day Gifts Make Life Happier for Angel of Home

MOTHERS will be remembered this year on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 11, not only with greetings, but also with gifts which add pleasure to life and lighten burdens. The trend ever since the day was originated in 1906 has been toward making life easier for mother.

Kind words and complimentary expressions are fine and will always be addressed to mother on the special day when she is honored, but her folks are learning through newspapers and in other ways that mother needs health to bear and rear sturdy children, she needs contact with the world to aid her in guiding the children wisely and well, and she needs the amusement and recreation which maintain good nature and enable her to impart this desirable characteristic to those under her care.

Newspaper readers will remember news items printed about a year ago, recording the rush of the public to the stores and the photograph studios in seeking gifts for mother. In some cities, it was reported, stores were sold out of popular lines of goods and some of the photograph studios had to turn away business.

As the custom of observing Mother's Day becomes more extensive each year, the prospect is that this year's observance will be the largest. Preparations have for several months been under way.

Fly the Flag

The first and most proper observance is to get out the flag and hang it at the front of the house.

When the Congress of the United States in 1914 passed an act authorizing and requesting President Woodrow Wilson to issue a proclamation, asking the people to observe Mother's Day by displaying the national flag at their homes and other places, "as a public expression of our love and reverence for the mothers of our country," the custom of displaying the flag was set.

In the week previous to Mother's Day parties, banquets and entertainments are held, at which mothers are the honored guests. Sometimes these affairs are arranged by groups or civic associations, sometimes by daughters, sometimes by children's groups. Usually the program consists of speaking, singing, lunch, sometimes games and most always presenting the mothers with souvenirs or making it the occasion on which the members of each family present to the mother the gifts they have procured for her.

Less Drudgery for Mother

Since Mother's Day was originated 24 years ago by Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia in honor of her own mother who had passed away, the mother's view of life has undergone a remarkable change, similar to the view of the entire public. People are trying to do away with the drudgery of life, much of which fell upon mother in her household duties. There was a time when the world thought that drudgery and sacrifice, even at the expense of health, built character. In the quarter century since that time the world has come to believe that there are better ways of developing strength of character and spirit—ways more agreeable and enjoyable. Out of this belief comes the sentiment for relieving mothers of the over-heavy burdens.

Feeding Family Is Easier

Household machinery is taking the load of work from mother's shoulders. The jokesters still have their fun about families being fed out of tin cans, but the fact is that much of the food now sold is as good as mother herself made and saves her much labor.

Dressmaking is almost a lost art for mother, though she used to make the dresses for herself and the girls and the suits for the small boys. Now she can buy better than she can make and her strength is again conserved.

A quarter of a century ago amusement, while a pleasure for mother, was also a hard task. To go a long distance to a picnic by buggy and railroad or to travel downtown to amusement places taxed her strength. Now the automobile gives her convenience for much more outdoor recreation with less work. Entertainment comes into her home by radio and phonograph, or, if she wishes to go to a theater, she finds it in her neighborhood.

This year, to add to the respect in which motherhood is held and to foster protection and loving care for children, the especial wards of the mother, the Photographers' Association of America will assemble photographs of mothers and children of the United States and Canada, up to Mother's Day, for the purpose of organizing an exhibit known as the Hall of Honor of America's Lovely Mothers and Attractive Children.

Selections by Famous Judges

Mothers and children are mailing their recent photographs to the headquarters of the association in Cleveland, where the judges, Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart and Miss Fannie Hurst, famous American authors, and Charles Aylett, president of the Photographers' Association of America, will make selections for the Hall of Honor. The association will pay for photographs with international awards ranging from $1500 to $250, and with sectional awards ranging from $100 to $25, a total of 444 awards amounting to $20,000.

The photographs in the Hall of Honor will be hung at the national convention and exhibition of the Photographers' Association of America in Milwaukee in July, on which occasion President Herbert Hoover and Canadian Premier W. L. Mackenzie King will convey messages of felicitation to the association.

Besides greeting cards, flowers and candy, lasting and labor-saving gifts will be presented to mother this year, the reports indicate.

Some families make it the occasion of giving photographs. Either the members of the family arrange for mother to go to the studio and have her photograph taken so that they may have pictures by which to remember her, or they have their own photographs taken to present to her so that she may have near her the pictures of those whom she loves the most. These photographs can be handed down through several generations.

Practical Help for Mother

So Mother's Day brings more than sentiment. To these ministering angels of the home it brings happiness and practical help and this year will do so more than ever before.

Miss Anna Jarvis celebrated the first Mother's Day alone. The next year a few of her Philadelphia friends joined with her in observing the day. By the third year, 1908, the custom was becoming known and was observed in a small way outside of Pennsylvania. Miss Jarvis wrote to governors and to congressmen and urged the passing of acts calling on the public to observe the day. When legislators took up the idea, it spread rapidly.

The day was first observed in the British Isles in 1914.

General J. J. Pershing directed the American and French armies to observe it in 1917 and France began to observe it nationally in 1926.

Venezuela sanctioned it by act of Congress in 1921 and in 1922 gave prizes for Mother's Day hymns, one of which was set to music and is sung each year in the Mother's Day gatherings. In 1925 the Venezuela government had a sculptured group made in marble, representing motherhood.

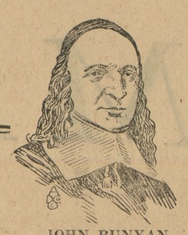

Mother's Day is now observed annually in many parts of North and South America, Europe, Africa, and in such countries as Japan, China and Palestine.

Children are urged in the talks and songs and the writings to let mother know by some token that they have not forgotten her.

The children are told that along with these material expressions of appreciation should go that other way of showing devotion to mother, best expressed by the behavior, by living as she wants the children to live, so that she may feel that her labor and care for them have not been in vain, but that her virtues have been anchored in her children.

There was a time when the joy of motherhood was the only compensation for the mother's life of hard work and monotony, but the progress of the world in the humanities now aids mother in maintaining physical strength, well being, happiness and peace.

That is the trend in the observance of Mother's Day and indicates how the greatest Mother's Day of all time, in the year 1930, will be observed.

THE ROBIN

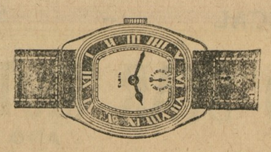

I saw a little robin once,
Where I always like to go.
He sang a song of cheer, he did,
Don't kill him, I tell you, no.

How would you like to be killed,
By giants, as they go.
The next day, he and his mate,
Had begun to build their nest.

They sang as they worked they did.
And they worked their very best,
They drove away the cowbird,
The other birds' regular pest.

PRIZES FOR ESSAY

Within a comparatively short period we shall be commemorating the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of Maryland in which celebration both State and Nation will appropriately participate.

The Maryland Tercentenary Commission, 849 Park Avenue, as its introductory message to the people of our State, is offering a series of 13 radio-dramas. Beginning Monday, April 28, six of these are to be broadcast on successive Monday evening at 7.30 over Station WFBR, Baltimore. The last of the six will be broadcast June 2, after which the broadcasting will be suspended until September or October, when the remaining seven will be presented.

All of these dramas are based upon events bearing upon the origin or development of Maryland, Province and State—all will be strictly historical, and the principal characters will use words known to have been used by them in the course of their respective careers. This exact-quotation feature will, perhaps, be carried to unique extent in the production of radio plays.

The dramas have been prepared under the supervision of Matthew Page Andrews, historian and author, and the historic figures concerned will be impersonated by the Vagabond Players.

It will be of interest to high school pupils throughout the State to learn that prizes will be offered for the best essay, description, or exposition of any one of the plays, or upon the series. A member of the Commission has offered $100.00 in gold for such compositions by high school students, viz: $50.00 for the first award; $25.00 for the second; $10.00 for the third, and three $5.00 awards for other meritorious presentations. Other prizes may be announced for the upper grammar grade pupils. The terms or conditions of the contest will be published later.

The first of the series will be introduced by Governor Ritchie April 28, and State Superintendent Cook will introduce the drama presented May 12.

The titles of the first six dramas are:

April 28, Sir George Calvert Becomes Secretary of State.

May 5, My Lord Baltimore Visits Jamestown.

May 12, The Ark and the Dove Prepare to Sail.

May 19, The Governor of Virginia Calls on the Governor of Maryland, April, 1634.

May 26, Establishing Local Self-Government.

June 2, The Baltimore-Claiborne War.

MRS. A. E. SALLAWAY DIES AFTER A FALL

Mrs. Ara E. Sallaway, aged 86 years, widow of Thomas H. Sallaway, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Wood, 801 West Tenth street, Wilmington, Saturday morning, following an illness of a few days due to a fall down the stairs of her home. Mrs. Sallaway developed pneumonia and failed to treatment.

Mrs. Sallaway was born and reared in Galena, Md., the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Crisfield. She lived there for more than forty five years. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Wood, three sons, George C., Eugene E., and T. Harry Sallaway, of Wilmington.

Mrs. Sallaway has one sister, Mrs. Jane Hicks, two brothers, Edwin Crisfield, of Galena, Lewin Crisfield, of Locust Grove, and two grand children, Edgar C. and T. Henry Wood, of Wilmington.

The funeral took place from the home at 2 o'clock, advanced time, on Monday afternoon, burial in Wilmington and Brandywine Cemetery. The Rev. Dr. J. W. Colona, of Harrison Street M. E. Church, conducted the services.
