You are Losing Milk Profits...

. . unless you're positive that the feed you're using now is producing milk at the lowest possible cost per quart. It's what you've got left after paying your feed bill that counts. That's why Bull Brand feeders can show a bigger net profit. Why not run a test with B-B against your present feed? Try it for 30 days on one cow, or more if you like. If it doesn't win as most productive per dollar of feed cost, the dealer returns every cent you paid.

Milk Producers Face Competition

In addition to the fact that milk producers of Delaware and Maryland are fighting to sell their milk at a profit, it was learned that they are now combatting competition from Wisconsin.

Milk can be produced cheaper in Wisconsin than in Delaware and Maryland, probably gecause of the larger amount of grazing land and because of cheaper grain and fodder. and also due to the lack of the strict requirements for care of herds, and tuberculin tests that are in force in this section.

As a result sweet cream is shipped in car loads from Wisconsin to Philadelphia. Dairymen take in thousands of dollars a week and the investment of the Delaware farmer in dairy equipment and cattle represents thousands of dollars. At the present time the price of milk to the producer is at a low point. This is due partly to over production and partly to the competition from Western States.

Clarence Fraim, president of Fraim Dairies said yesterday, in regard to the requirements for the care of herds and for the tests of herds for any disease in cattle, that practically all the herds of the State are controlled by the requirements of the State Board of Health and the Federal inspectors, and that at least 75 per cent of all milk used in Wilmington is tuberculin tested. By May 1, according to the recommendations of the dealers to dairymen in response to the demand of the State Board of Health all milk used in Wilmington will come only from herds that have been tested for the presence of any signs of tuberculosis he said.

Last fall it was advocated by the buyers that more milk should be produced gy the dairymen and the price of milk was slightly raised about two cents on a hundred pounds of butter, which is the basis of setting the price. Wit hthe increase in price and the encouragement to greater production, a large quantity of milk was produced and the price was reduced to the former rate.

The Inter-State Milk Producers' Association has been working for some years in encouraging the testing of all cattle as to tubercular condition, and the results have been that practically all the cattle of Kent have been given a clean bill of health. This was done in the interests of both the consumer and the producer. Regulations have been passed in the interest of the consuming public in practically all cities, insisting on the testing of all cattle and milk for any tubercular germ presence, and the result has been that in order to sell their product satisfactorily, all dairymen have had to have their cattle tested and their herds approved by State or county inspectors. In addition, cattle sold for meat are examined by the Federal inspectors.

As a result of the careful testing of cattle most of the milk from this State is admitted on a clean bill of health, and the association is insisting that the same requirements be placed on milk shipped from the West and Middle West.

In the summer months when Atlantic City and the other seaside resorts are crowded with people, much surplus milk is shipped directly from this State to those resorts, but in the winter there is little demand for the surplus milk in those places. The October, November and December are the months when the basic figures paid for milk to the dairymen during the year are set. The figures set at this time are usually in effect throughout the balance of the year. This price is set, it is said, by the New York butter market, which is now very low, as there is a large surplus of butter on hand.

The members of the association and also of farm organizations are cautioning the dairymen now against too rapid a development of his herd. It is said that whenever the price increases a little, the dairymen all begin to increase their herds, and then all bring their milk to the buyers. This tends to lower the price of milk because of over-production and the dairymen are faced with former prices again but with increased herds and expenditure.

The value of such organizations to the farmer as the Tri-State Packers' Association and the Inter-State Milk Producers' Association, and the Grange is that they can unify the action of the farmers, can guide their future policy and assist in preventing years of comparative scarcity and then over-production. They give to the farmer a method of controlling the rate of production and planning the future production to coincide with the probable demand.

Japenese Beetle Quarantine Here

Kent was included in the area over which a quarantine was established last week by the Secretary of Agriculture in an effort to halt the spread of Japanese Beetle. Kent, however, is in the lightly infested area and residents here will not be inconvenienced to any great extent by the new regulations.

Sixteen Maryland counties are embraced by the new quarantine, which also includes sections in Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Virginia.

Restriction on the interstate movement of farm products will apply to the generally infested areas, but will not affect the movement of farm products from the lightly infested areas, the department explained.

Preserve Historic Spot

Maine Daughters of the American Revolution have voted that Pemaquid is the most historic spot in the Pine Tree state. An act of the Maine legislature made a state park of the area surrounding the fort. In all there have been four forts at Pemaquid; the blockhouse called Fort Pemaquid, erected in 1630; Fort Charles, 1667; Fort William Henry, 1692, and Fort Frederick, 1729.

It was at Pemaquid that English people are said to have landed 13 years earlier than the Pilgrims at Plymouth. Pemaquid is a part of the old town of Bristol, which was named for Bristol, England.

Age Brings Penalties

The penalties of old age, it is evident, are not confined to those which Byron enumerated—gout and the stone. Loneliness must also be considered, and when we call the roll of the friends of our youth and there is not a whisper in reply, then, perhaps, we shall feel the full burden of our years. Sir Oliver Lodge stated that science had made possible the extension of life to a hundred years. If such a gift is universally bestowed, it will be well. But there are few of us, perhaps, who would accept it as a particular favor.—Exchange.

Famous Rum Quay

Rum quay, the most jealously guarded spot in the London West India docks, is inclosed by an immense glass roof that originally formed a covered way to the Crystal palace when that building was erected in Hyde park in 1851, to house the great exhibition. Here, isolated behind iron doors, puncheons of rum, each holding 103 gallons of spirit many degrees overproof, are laid before being rolled into the vaults which extend to the water's edge, and afford accommodation for 40,000 of these gigantic casks.
