IF the Baltimore Sun would concern itself more to having the horrible murderers and assaulters punished and less blackguarding of the lynchers it would be doing something towards seeing that justice is done.

IT IS worth a visit to Chestertown to see the beautiful display of lighted Christmas trees on High street. The merchants and business houses have never presented such a lovely scene as is now unfolded to the public. The trees are fine size and with scores of flichering vari-colored lights make an attractive picture. Surely the people of Chestertown are doing their part to make this a Merry Christmas for everyone.

DO NOT BOYCOTT

It will be a serious mistake if the business houses of the Eastern Shore decide to withdraw all trade from Baltimore City because of vitriolic articles appearing in the Sun papers. It is no more just to hold the business men responsible for attacks of the Sun writers than for the people of the whole Eastern Shore to be blamed for the acts of a few men in lynching a colored murderer at Salisbury. This boycott can accomplish no useful purpose and will do more harm than good.

Leading up to this talk of boycott, was the unfortunate affair at Salisbury. Their act will give cause for a blush of shame to present and all future generations of Eastern Shoremen. Significant, however, is the fact that what feeling of anger and resentment actually exists, is not between the races, white and colored, but between the whites themselves, and this resentment is directed solely against H. L. Mencken, notorious writer, who contributes to the Baltimore Evening Sun, and is editor of The American Mercury, a magazine of iconoclastic teachings. This man whose name would indicate that if not he, at least his ancestors were immigrants to America, in a two column article in The Evening Sun, attempts to hold to ridicule, an entire section of the land which gave shelter to his ancestors, and to him, and in so doing, draws upon himself the condemnation of all fair-minded, right-thinking citizens.

WILD FOWL SEASON ENDS IN MARYLAND

At Sunset Tuesday in compliance with Federal regulations, hunters declared an armistice in the war on migratory wild fowl until the season opens again next November.

In the first three weeks of the curtailed thirty-day shooting season, wild fowl in Maryland waters devoted their time largely to feeding instead of flying, while hunters fidgeted in their blinds and waited for the birds to take flight.

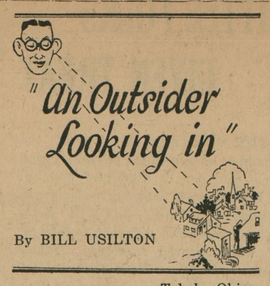

Fogs and warm weather have been responsible for the ducks' failure to rise. In the last few days, however, the birds have been flying up and down the bay, while hunters have begun to get their bag limits of fifteen ducks within a two-hour shooting limit.

Geese have been plentiful, but, like the ducks, they have preferred eating to getting shot. The fowl have been most abundant in the wheat fields of Cecil and Kent counties but have refused to furnish sport for the hunters by rising from their feeding grounds. The limit of four wild geese, however, has been made by several gunners.

The upland game season, which closes December 31, has been good in most sections of the State.

WE agree with an exchange that there are too many loopholes in our criminal laws. This is true in most of the States. They offer too many opportunities for annoying delays and sometimes for defeating the ends of justice.

Lynching is never justified. Furthermore, it is the duty of all good citizens to uphold the law. If laws are defective or weak they can, and ought to be corrected. Public sentiment and ... bring this ... Ou...

Toledo, Ohio.

WHILE you are seated comfortably at the fireside struggling thru this muck your old gossiper is packing his trunks and valises (it used to be called a suit case when the Judge carried it about the country) for a trip to dear old Detroit; which town is to be encumbered with his presence until they catch on to his tricks, as apparently, Toledo has done. For ye olde folderol has been transferred to that seat—yea, even horn, windshield and steering gear—of the automobile industry.

My fan mail should now be addressed, FOB, Detroit; while new crankcases and gaskets will be supplied upon receipt of a money order!

****

MY mail the other day gave forth a copy of the Fall issue of the Washington College Bulletin, and I hasten to advise all those who usually throw it into the ashcan without a glance to remove the cover and read. It is by far the best of the many bulletins that have come from the Hill since Washington gave his express consent.

An interesting article is the one by Edwin T. Luckey, who is researching at the Hollywood studios of dear old RKO. A vocation which he states is important in the production of authentic talking films.

The article is exceptionally well written, the material interesting, while the pages upon which it is printed are enlivened with cuts of the author at work and the building which houses his office.

Being on the other side of the road—that is, merely employed to endeavor to sell the product that is manufactured so authentically — I wondered, while reading Mr. Luckey's piece, if the researchers and producers ever considered just what the people want in the way of entertainment when they begin to make one of their authentic epics.

Having tried to sell some of the products of Hollywood for the past two years and a half is enough to make anyone wonder if its really necessary to find out what kind of a haircut General Sheridan had at the battle of Bull Run; while at the same time neglecting to determine if costume dramas are what people want to see. If nobody comes into the threatre after so much time has been given to authenticity it seems to me there's not much sense in it. I may have the wrong impression, but its my understanding that a manufacturer produces an article that customers want; or an article that at least is more than an historical replica.

Hollywood, if talking pictures are going to peep around that oft-mentioned corner at "good times," has got to stop giving the people what they should have, and begin giving them what they are clamoring for. Fact is they are taking that word "talking" too literally, and most of them have forgotten that life today is action; with a little chatter in between during rest periods.

IN spite of my discourse on Hollywood headaches, as we see them, I think Mr. Luckey has thrown together an interesting article; which will probably result in many of the seniors of today turning into full-fledged researchers.

He discussed his work thoroughly and, in so doing, has given me an excellent idea for future columns.

My work in Detroit will bring me into intimate contact with the majority of the great stars of the stage, screen and radio. Such folks as Eddie Cantor, Irene Rich, Paul Whiteman, Mitzi Green, Jackie Cooper, Cab Calloway, Bill Robinson, Jan Pennington, Seth Parker and many others.

And still looking upon myself as an Eastern Shoreman, with an Eastern Shoreman's reaction, views and thoughts, I'm going to try to tell you just how these impressed me and my picture of them as mere men and women. Or even a few inside facts that haven't been printed in Ballyhoo or the fan magazines. Just in the raw if you choose to use the word.

Its going to be lots of fun for me, whether you like it or not; which is not the thing I should say since we should give the folks what they want.

HEARD a funny one the other day. One of the more popular electric refrigerators, a few years ago, burst upon the market and found that its funds were exhausted before the American public became acclimated to the absence of ice. They were facing bankruptcy.

In India the English government passed a law that obsoleted the age-old custom of burning the dead immediately upon death; the bodies had to be kept in state for three days.

The manager of a subsidiary company to the manufacturers of the electric ice box saw the chance; convinced the gov... authorities ... ended ... signed up $75,000,000 worth of the cooling plants in one month. Which netted enough profit for the company to splurge with their advertising and make the American public ice-cube-conscious!

And that's why, little boys and girls, we have ice-box dessert.
