The Kent News

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1931

A SUBSCRIBER asks the NEWS to publish the date of the big Galena fire. It occurred March 31, 1893. Started in Henry Parr's dwelling at 7.45 A. M., and burned Town Hall, Peacock's, Ireland's, Hicks and others to the extent of $35,000.

The 300th Church Anniversary depicted in song and pageant on Kent Island on Thursday was an unusual occurrence. Kent county played an important part and several hundred of its citizens were present. It was a fitting tribute to the spirit of christianity wihch has budded and flowered to beautiful fruition. It was an impressive portrayal of the great changes which has taken place. While these scenes were being enacted four or more air planes were circling over our heads and everyone of the thousands of visitors came in automobiles.

The Eastern Shore is rich in tradition and history and this occasion brought vividly to the front this fact. We are proud of its precious lineage and courageous spirits who transformed a barren wilderness into a land of peace and plenty and where the God of all grace smiled upon us in establishing the worship of the Divine at the very beginning of our history.

The NEWS joins in congratulations to all who planned and those who took part in making the affair such a great success.

THE attention of our readers is called to the "Special Notice to Voters" appearing elsewhere in this issue by authority of the Supervisors of Elections.

It notifies all persons who have moved into Maryland from other States and who registered last year without declaring their intention to become citizens, or who wish to register next year, that they must declare such intention before the Clerk of the Court on or before November 7, 1931.

We earnestly urge upon our readers that if they know any persons in their neighborhoods who are affected, they will call attention to the provisions noted, that no person may lose the privilege of voting.

A BILLION DOLLARS RAISED FOR BANKS

The rapid progress reported in the bankers' efforts to complete the billion-dollar credit corporation is as good news as the country has had in some time. In effect, it is simply the doing on a national scale of what has been done in many instances, in this crisis and in previous ones, by local banks in many cities. It has been no uncommon thing when a bank with good but "slow" assets was caught in a tight position for other banks in the same city to give it aid and relief. The other banks save themselves the shock to credit and to business generally that results from a failure and. in cooperation with the bank that was threatened, they gradually work off the "slow" assets as times become normal, very often without any loss at all to themselves. The giant credit corporation that is being formed by the bankers from their own resources would carry on similar operations for the protection of banks anywhere that might be threatened, because, on the one hand, they have assets normally good which cannot be realized upon now save at heavy and dangerous loss and, because, on the other hand, some of their depositors become nervous and start runs.

THOMAS A. EDSON

Thomas A. Edson is at the point of death, it is claimed by his physician. and before another issue of the NEWS will probably have passed away. He is in a semi-conscious condition and his death is looked for any day.

Thomas A. Edson is probably the best known man in America, and is the greatest inventor of his age. A brief chronological sketch of his life is:

Edison's first job was a train butcher. He also had a secret laboratory in the baggage car where he practiced chemistry.

At sixteen he was the most expert telegraph operator in the employ of the Western Union.

Later, he became interested in the telephone, and invented the carbon transmitter which made the telephone practicable.

In 1877-8 he invented the phonograph.

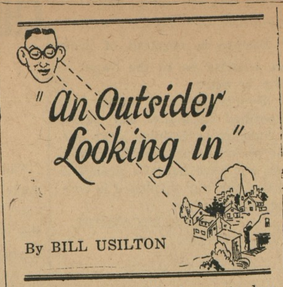

In 1879 he invented the incandescent lamp and complete system of distribution of electric current.

He developed the kinetoscope to the present form of moving picture.

Edison has taken out over a thousand potents in this country.

In the library at Constantinople there is a manuscript of Homer written in gold letters on serpent's skin.

While some progress has been made it is still true that war is better at abolishing nations than nations are at abolishing war.

By BILL USILTON

The town council's decree to ban roller skating from the streets of Chestertown is an act of stupendous import; a worthy measure to be the first official document drawn up by the town fathers to add another law to the statutes. And one that few grown-ups will break. There would be little lawlessness if more of them were passed, thereby taking the temptation to transgress out of the hands of the elders and surrounding our more intelligent children with a tool whose suppression will keep our cops awake.

But this law has momentous consequences within it, if you want to look at it from an economic point of view.

First of all, the hardware stores should register a protest against this curtailment of a source of sales that is particularly lucrative in the Fall. And of all Falls to curtail sales, this one had to be chosen!

Then, driven off the sidewalks, the kids are going to take advantage of Chestertown's crystal-smooth roadways, thereby becoming potential customers for the undertaker and the doctor; and, incidentally, increasing adhesive tape, iodine and mercurochrome sales.

The clothing stores, too, will feel the pinch of this ordinance when the total number of torn stockings falls to a new low caused by the depreciation in tumbles. While the municipality's milliners will regret a decided drop in darning cotton sales.

Grocers will begin to complain as housewives reduce their orders of milk, meat, peanut butter and other growing foods because of an epidemic of small appetites brought on by the lack of proper exercise.

And, to top off all of these devastating effects, the children will come home from school, animated with pent-up energy that can't be burned out with a strenuous hour on skates, and sit around the house listening to the Crime Club on the air; drinking bicarboniate of soda to relieve their indigestion; drawing pictures on the walls for sake of something better to do; and making a general nuisance of themselves in an effort to find a substitute for means of expression that has been denied their willing feet.

I hope the town fathers have gone into this thing pretty thoroughly and are not acting hastily on snap judgment. Besides saving our old ladies and curbstone loafers from being run down by fast-skating youngster they must consider our merchants.

Personally, I think every child should be out raking leaves from three to five in the afternoon! Saturday mornings, and siesta time, should be spent beating biscuits!

****

Never, never believe in signs! Look what happened to that old wooden tub up on the Sassafras River. Clean Amusement For Clean People didn't seem to be the right formula for keeping peace with John Law and his henchmen. I wager that they wouldn't have bothered the place at all if no sign had been used.

The boys at the corner store thought he was a liar when the sign was placed there, and the arrest and conviction were merely to prove they were right. So goes the world!

****

Two young people living in New York took exception to a paragraph typed by a Chestertown columist last week, even to the extent of composing a letter reprimanding said columnist for distorting the facts of the article he referred to.

I hate to see young people, in the heat of anger and reproach, do something that will bring more comment down upon their heads, so I persuaded them to destroy the epistle.

I read both the article that was used by the columnist and his own version of the episode, and I suggest that he should be a little more careful in his assumptions if he wants readers to have faith in him.

It made a good story for the Sage of Cross Street's chatter but it really left a bad taste and a mark of incompetence with a young lady who is proving to be as efficient as any in her line of work.

Meant in fun, the article turned out to be a source of worry for these young people when, actually, the incident referred to had nothing to do with anyone working out of the New York office.

The whole thing can be explained by the fact that even the Enterprising Russell has trouble finding material to write about, at times.

****

This must be some sort of record. A fellow sitting at a nearby table in Childs the other lunch-time never relaxed his grip on his knife and fork from the time his order was brought in until he got up to leave the place. I even thought for a moment that he was going to be nabbed for stealing silver, he was that attached to those pieces of cutlery. He is one of the few who can butter with the knife and eat with the fork at the same time..
