The Kent News

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1931

AT a meeting of the Maryland Tax Commission Wednesday in Baltimore, announcement was made of the appointment of Charles M. Bright. of Stevensville, as Tax Supervisor for Queen Anne's County, to succeed George I. Harrison, of Crumpton, who resigned last month. The appointment becomes effective Sept. 15.

The Kent Musical Society is to be congratulated upon having produced two singers who for two successive years have won the prize as the best male singer on the Eastern Shore. There were at least eight entries at each contest. It is to be hoped that College will not let its reputation for singing be diminished as this Society passes its mantle to them.

By BILL USILTON

After a lapse of three weeks, during which you have no doubt rejoiced because of the absence of this chatter from these pages, I again find myself pounding out choice paragraphs (?) for the consumption of Kent Countians, and a few people who insist that they have a parental interest in my future.

No matter what you think about it, or how hard it is for me to get back in the old routine after a marvelous vacation, the Outsider is beginning to Look In once more. As if anybody cared!

****

And still with no particular theme in mind upon which to write I think it would be rather nice of me to admit that I was pleasantly surprised at the number of persons who said (I hate to doubt anyone's word without definite proof) they read this weekly brainstorm. Yet from the remarks some people must read the stuff and I find, from the concensus of opinion handed down, that "Famous Kent Countians" is the most popular paragraph. One woman gave me a delightful idea by remarking, "Did those people pay you to write about them?" Now if any of my gentle readers believe this please don't forget the "Third" after my name when you fill out the check.

****

Speaking of "Famous Kent Countians," several well-to-do citizens have urged me to write about one of our popular barristers. In fact they have even gone so far as to offer me a few delectable items concerning his private life that will be a revelation to a great many people. However, I have learned from experience to be discreet and when the mood strikes me to do a printer's ink portrait of this public servant, and Nemesis of Kent's liquor traffic, I will choose my words carefully and strive to put in a subtle touch. Even though I'll write nothing but the truth, the subtle touch will be necessary for some of the facts already gathered are sensational.

To me one of the most helpless feelings in the world comes at the moment when you have just moved, and all your belongings are piled in heaps in the middle of your living room waiting to be sorted out and placed in their proper places.

But then when you start to unpack and set things aright its a lot of fun picking over some things that you never knew you had; like old neckties, some bills you thought you had paid, bundles of odds and ends that were dumped from your coat pockets and placed in the bureau drawer, hats that were used for rainy days while attending college and old soiled suits that you kept hanging around for no other reason but sentiment.

However, it gets tough again when the new windows are bound up tight with paint, and the rug you had in the old place is way too small for your living room. It brings to mind the philosophy of the tramp, who said, "It's no disgrace to be poor, but it is very inconvenient at times."

Some pessimists who are continually yelling that Chestertown and its citizens have no pep or town spirit must have gotten a terrible shock during carnival week. I stood near some of those booths last Saturday night and marvelled at the inexhaustible display of energy exhibited by our efficient firemen. Of course some of them were all fired with enthusiasm because they were before the public and their ego was having an outlet for expression, but I know most of them had no thought of themselves, or their public, and were doing their turn for the good old community. One way or the other its the same difference—they were out there to pull your leg, and they did it-

It seems that the lineage of two of Chestertown's would-be columnists has been stepped up a couple of notches. Doc Clarke last week referred to the Curbstone Diplomat and me as Will XII and Will XIII. I want to say, in defense of the use of numerals after my name, that they are placed there in the interests of safety and security. I use them to keep Mr. Will Smith and his cohorts from committing grave errors and allowing my mail to fall in the hands of the Judge; and for the protection of the same gentleman and his bank account when I write on little slips of paper and send them in to Mr. James Crouch and Ike Strong.

As for Will Collins I'm too modest to put my opinion in print as to his reason for using the Roman numerals.

Doc Clarke also hinted that he was trying to stir up a columnistic war among Kent's worthy delineators of all that's good in the way of news. As if we didn't have enough on our hands striving to answer the splendid editorials directed at us by one of the bosses. I suppose our only salvation is to start throwing wine bricks.
