Home runs by Hurlock in the second and Archibald in the eighth clinched the victory. Loller himself made his team's only score when he pushed a circuit clout over the fence in the fourth frame.

CECILTON RALLY WINS

The Cecilton club, of the Chesapeake Bay League, beat out a close victory over Galena when a ninth-inning spurt garnered two tallies and a 4 to 3 win for the home club as Lockwood muffed Bryan on third. Game played at Cecilton.

He came home after Jones had stolen second and Peterson had bunted. Jones scored as Johnson juggled Wolfe's grounder.

ROCK HALL CONTINUES

Rock Hall added to its string of victories by beating Millington, 11 to 4, after Bodvarka went to pieces in the sixth and the visitors pushed over six tallies out of seven hits. Hurley, local left fielder, robbed Joe Williams of a homer when he staged a spectacular catch by beating the hit to the fence and pulling it out of the air on the other side.

STILL POND DEFEATS WEST KENT 4 TO 3

With Bramble pitching his best game of the season, the Still Pond Club nosed out a 4 to 3 victory over the strong West Kent outfit on the Chestertown High School diamond Saturday, both teams playing tight ball in the field. Kendall's home run in the seventh aided the victory, though Harris, playing in the left pasture for West Kent, robbed the victors of several potential hits by sensational fielding.

Alaskan Vegetables

The growing of hardier vegetables has been demonstrated throughout most of Alaska south of the Arctic circle. Radishes, mustard, turnips, kale and lettuce can be grown anywhere. Carrots, parsnips, parsley, peas, cress, cabbage, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, onions, spinach, beets, potatoes, rhubarb, and such herbs as caraway, mint, catnip, sage and thyme may be grown along the coast region and in the interior of Alaska if garden sites are selected with reference to shelter and exposure to the sun.

Neon Colors

Neon was discovered by Sir William Ramsey and W. M. Travers in 1898. The development of a neon condenser tube employing neon gas dates back to about 1911, but the use of neon in commercial advertising is comparatively recent. Ordinary neon glows with a brilliant reddish-yellow glow. By the addition of a small amount of mercury, a blue color is obtained. Other colors are obtained by combining with various gases or by using colored glass tubes.

THE GENTLEMAN WHO FAILED

AMBROSE SMITH grinned smugly. "Have you heard the latest news about Larry Clement?" he asked.

Marion was startled. "Something nice, of course," she remarked.

"Why are you so sure?" Ambrose's long thin nose fairly quivered with eagerness. He had news about Larry that would quash forever any girl's interest in him. Marion had been engaged to the young man in question once upon a time, but Ambrose had heard that Marion and Larry had quarreled and that Larry had gone out to Seattle and become interested in a growing lumber business there. "Why are you so sure, Marion?" repeated Ambrose.

"I have always been sure that Larry would succeed," she said coolly.

"Then you will be surprised to learn that he has failed for sure—down and out! Disappeared with the cashier of the company (Larry was the treasurer, you know) and ten thousand dollars! The police have trailed them into the mountains—expect to get 'em any day. It's all in the papers—the city papers," he added with relish.

Marion was white now—all the pretty color drained from her face. "I don't believe it, Ambrose."

They were silent for awhile, and then Ambrose spoke again. His smile was bitter, his smugness had disappeared. "Where do I come in, Marion? You can't believe in Larry Clement and at the same time love me, can you?"

"Have I ever encouraged you to believe that I love you?"

"Not exactly."

"Then, let us clear up the matter now. I do not love you, Ambrose, not one little bit. I do not even like you since you're slandering your old friend. Larry was that, and he saved your life in the war—" Her voice trembled, but her gray eyes were unafraid.

"What if he did save my live? He had the chance to do it—I would have saved his if I had the chance."

"You are contemptible," she cried. "I hope I never see you again."

And her hope seemed to be fulfilled, for the next day Ambrose discovered that Mr. Lane and his daughter had left that morning for Seattle.

"So that's that!" said Ambrose disgustedly.

All the way across the continent Marion's heart kept time to the pounding of the train.

"Some mistake, dear," her father reassured her. "Larry Clement was hasty and high-tempered, but as for him being a thief—I'd trust him with every dollar I possessed."

"And he isn't a failure, is he, Dad?" she whispered as she kissed him for his loyalty to the man she loved.

"No man could be a failure with Larry's war record," commented her father. Then he added: "The train is slowing down for this small station—must have been flagged for some reason."

The "reason" was apparent when Marion looked out of the window. The flagman was rolling up his signal flag and interest was centered in a group of four men. Two men, evidently country sheriffs, for they wore stars on their breasts, stood close to two other men—one of them a frightened, hunted individual, and the second, big, strong, robust with health—Larry Clement himself!

"They have caught the robbers," the cry ran through the train like a flash and heads crowded every window. Marion, pale and determined, followed her father to the platform, where a conductor was opening the car door.

As the group of men brushed through the crowd, Larry caught sight of Marion and her father. "You—two—here—?" he gasped.

Marion slipped a hand in his. "We came to see you, Larry," she whispered. "I believe in you, dear, no matter what anyone says."

"Oh, my darling!" he murmured. Then he kissed her and held her close a moment.

"Why, you don't act like a prisoner," murmured the happy girl. Her father smiled knowingly.

"He isn't a prisoner, dear. He caught the absconder himself, assisted by a detective from Chicago. Larry and the detective followed him into the mountains and caught him."

"I knew Larry was all right—he certainly hasn't failed," she murmured.

"I've been elected general manager of our Chicago office, and that means I can afford to marry, if—" Larry looked quizzically down at her.

She looked squarely at him with honest gray eyes ashine. "There are no 'ifs' about it, Larry—and life is too precious to trifle with—and so—"

And so they were married and lived happily ever after, and Ambrose Simth is getting to be a crusty bachelor, who still predicts that some day Larry will not make good.

But we don't believe him.

"Index Numbers"

The phrase index number is sometimes applied to any series in which a chosen term is written as 100 and the other terms expressed in percentages of it. Another definition is "an index number is a number adapted by its variations to indicate the increase or decrease of a magnitude not susceptible of definite measurement." Index numbers are applied to the measurement of the general movement of prices, cost of living, wages, production, consumption, employment, etc.

Great Sailor's Funeral

"A Full Relation of Another Voyage Into the West Indies Made by Sir Francis Drake," printed at London in 1652, says: "His interment was after this manner: His corps being laid in a Coffin of Lead, he was let downe into the Sea, the Trumpets indoleful manner echoing out this lamentation for so great a loss, and all the Canons in the Fleet were discharged, according to the custome of all Sea Funerall obsequies."

"TWICE warmed is he..."

As the man who cuts wood for fuel is warmed both by exercise and after by the fireside, so the saver glows in the security afforded by savings and after by the providing of those things that afford pleasure.

THE MAN WHO SAVES IS THE MAN WHO HAS.

McCORMICK-DEERING
ENCLOSED GEAR
ENSILAGE CUTTER

The McCormick-Deering No. 12 Ensilage Cutter is another International Harvester achievement. It sets a new standard in ensilage-cutter design and construction. Here is an ensilage cutter that embodies improved features taken from automobile and tractor construction.

The foundation of the No. 12 ensilsage cutter is a one-piece main frame enclosing the flywheel, cutter, transmission and apron drive. All the working parts are enclosed in an oil-tight and dust-proof housing, permitting all parts to run in a bath of oil. This construction, combined with the use of specially cut and heat-treated gears, assures exceptionally long life and efficient operation.

Other features of McCormick-Deering construction are:

Knife-on-flywheel type with four knives secured to flywheel of boiler plate steel.

Positive drive on feed apron with high and wide feed throat.

Working parts mounted on high grade, anti-friction bearings.

Length of cut can be changed without stopping machine.
