Operator, Two Repairmen Awarded T. N. Vail Medals

Miss Alice F. Sprague (center), operator, New Cumberland, W. Va.; Ivan F. Vannoy (left), repairman, Winchester, Va., and Henry C. Griffith, combination man, Sistersville, W. Va., awarded Vail medals.

Vail medals for noteworthy public service have just been awarded Miss Alice F. Sprague, telephone operator, New Cumberland, and Henry C. Griffith, combination man, Sistersville, W. Va., and Ivan F. Vannoy, repairman, Winchester, Va., according to an announcement made by John C. Koons, Washington, D. C., vice-president, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies.

Miss Sprague was honored, according to the citation accompanying her award:

"For courageous action and devotion to the public welfare.

"On March 8, 1930, at New Cumberland, West Virginia, when a fire threatened to destroy a section of the business district of the town, Miss Sprague summoned fire fighting assistance and maintained telephone service during a critical period."

Combinationman Griffith's citation reads:

"For the probable saving of human life through prompt initiative and intelligent action in an emergency.

"On October 8, 1930, near Sistersville, West Virginia, when a workman had been rendered unconscious by electric shock while aloft on a derrick, Mr. Griffith removed the man from the derrick and restored him to consciousness through the use of artificial respiration."

The citation accompanying the award of Repairman Vannoy shows that he was rewarded for intelligent initiative and devotion to the public welfare.

"On August 5, 1930, at Gore, Virginia, when a fire threatened to destroy the town, Mr. Vannoy summoned fire fighting assistance and saved telephone equipment from destruction. His efforts were responsible for maintaining and later restoring telephone service when it was vitally needed."

Vail medal awards are made annually as a memorial to Theodore N. Vail, former president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, according to Mr. Koons. Such awards are provided for by the Vail Memorial Fund, established as a memorial to Mr. Vail, who at the time of his death had long been recognized as one of the world's great business leaders, and to whose conspicuous service in the telephone field were largely due the expansion of the Bell System and the development of the art of telephony.

Telephone Company Teaches Employees Proper Food Use

There's an art in cooking. Miss Margaret Harhin, right, instructress, tells Mrs. Margaret Wood the correct way to make bran muffins.

Knowing that good health demands proper food, rest and recreation, young women employees of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company at Washington, D. C., have recently organized nutrition classes as post-graduate work of the general health course. About 1,300 women employees have graduated in health course work.

The nutrition course includes general information on what to eat, when to eat, and the proper selection and preparation of foods. The classes are directed by Miss Margaret Harhin, an employment supervisor of the traffic or operating department. The purpose of the course, she states, is to instruct young women forming the classes in the preparation and serving of well-balanced meals and eating at regular meal hours.

This course has been built around one day's food as a whole rather than around any specific food. One meal in itself, according to Miss Harhin, balanced from a nutrition standpoint will not compensate for inadequacies at the other two meals of the day.

In the elementary course in nutrition, simple food preparation is given with the idea that those participating must know, not only how to select food properly, but how to prepare it so that the nutritive properties are conserved to the fullest extent.

Twelve lessons of one and one-fourth hours each are necessary to complete the course. The classes are held one day each week on the employee's own time. Each lesson is a unit in itself, and is built around the discussion of one specific group of foods—such as vegetables, eggs, fruits or milk. The lesson includes a brief statement of the nutritive values of that particular food. For instance, if vegetables are the subject, there is a discussion of why they should be eaten and what they contribute to the daily diet.
