The Kent News

SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1931

THE State Roads Commission says that Kent county owes the commission $48,139.72 for work done on the Kent roads. But they also say that this debt will be settled by the end of the year from the gasoline tax.

THE new Democratic President of the Baltimore City Council weighs 315 pounds. Just about the size of Eddie Keenan, the former Washington College fotball star. No wonder Stanley Porter, a Washington College graduate, and the Republican opponent, could not defeat him. He could not "buck the center" with him in the line up.

PRESENTATION OF PICTURE

A meeting of the Kent County W. C. T. was held at Reid Hall, Washington College, on Monday, May 11, in conjunction with the regular weekly meeting of the Y. W. C. A. The special object of the meeting was the presentation of a picture to Washington College of Miss Frances E. Willard, the great leader of women in the temperance movement.

Mrs. J. Leonard Price, president of the Kent County W. C. T. U. gave a very interesting talk of Miss Willard's life and her noble work. Mrs. Wm. T. Brown reviewed some of the proceedings of Congress upon the presentation of the statute of Miss Willard, the first statute of a woman to be erected in Statuary Hall, The Capital, Washington, D. C., February 17, 1905.

Dr. Esther M. Dole, Dean of Women, accepted the picture on behalf of the colloge in a most acceptable manner, relating her impressions of Miss Willard gained when but a small child she had the privilege of hearing her speak. Miss Elizabeth Willis, newly elected president of the F. W. C. A., expressed the gratitude of the F. W. C. A. for the privilege of having Miss Willard's picture upon the walls of their meeting room as a constant inspiration.

Miss Mildred Covey delighted the audience with effective piano selection and Mrs. Fred. G. Usilton rendered an impressive vocal solo. It might be interesting to note that pictures of Miss Willard grace the walls of the Chestertown High School and Elementary School, both gifts of the Kent County W. C. T. U. upon previous occasions.

DR. CLARKE'S EXPERIENCE

Dr. E. J. Clarke, former school examiner for Kent, now editor of Pocomoke City's fine weekly, had the following experience last week:

"Well, sir, I parked my flivver the other day on the street in Pocomoke, and afterward another car pulled in ahead of me. When I was ready to leave, I had to back a little so as to get around the car in front. As I did so, I thought I felt a slight jar, but it was so very, very slight, it was almost unnoticeable. I proceeded on my way, and I noticed that people on the side walk were gesticulating, pointing, smiling, and otherwise acting in a rather unusual way. I looked back but couldn't see anything. As I speeded up, it seemed that every now and then I could hear a whoop let out, and this also caused me to look out the side window, back window, and every other way, but still everything seemed all right.

Finally, I heard a horn come up behind me and it began tooting in a way that all cars do when they want to pass, so I pulled out to let it go by. It didn't go by, it still kept on tooting. I looked back and the driver was giving me a signal to stop. I did so, got out, and blessed if I didn't like to step over one of those underfed Austin cars, hooked on to my rear bumper. When I backed away to get around the car I spoke of in town, I had hooked my rear bumper in the front bumper of my baby boat, and I was simply goin' off with it—that's all.

The little old gas wagon was too small for me to see, and being just a little hard of hearing, I disregarded its signel, as there was nothing in sight. If I had been going in the direction the driver wanted, he probably would not have said anything about the tow, he'd have saved gasoline. But he wanted to go North and I was bound South. He was in a predicament, but, thanks be, there were no bones broken, and no suit for damages. All I got to say those bugs had better stand from under or they'll fare bad."

THE Kent County Savings Bank has elected Cashier William F. Russell and Charles M. Satterfield as delegates to the State Bankers' Convention at Atlantic City next week. Allan A. Harris will represent the Chestertown Bank of Maryland.

Wm. B. Copper and Thos. D. Bowers will represent the Third National Bank.

AN OUTSIDER LOOKING IN

(BY W. B. USILTON, 3RD)

The protests of Harry Russell, "Doc" Clarke, Randolph Field, Jr., and Frank R. Kent to the contrary notwithstanding the KENT NEWS, from this moment until I'm either arrested or deported, is to have one column for which the editors are not to be held responsible. In other words "An Outsider-Lookin In" is to be projected weekly upon the readers of this sheet, providing very little of anything in particular and a lot of thoughts and items about everything under the Sun. And we might say at this point that if any complaints are to be made, or if anyone becomes seriously offended by the nonsense contained herein, he, she or it should have their lawyers communicate with me at once. For it must be remembered that father had enough trouble getting me out of town to be bothered with any frazzle that may arise from his willingness to donate a column for my innane ravings...And so I'm on my way, its your fault for reading it!

The first interesting item to burst upon my consciousness as a columnist is the daily installment of "The Life Of Albert C. Ritchie," currently appearing in the New York Daily News-tabloid newspaper with the largest circulation in America (1,320,000 copies) and third largest in the world. Martin Sommers is the author and he's certainly doing "Our Bert" up brown. Of Maryland and Marylanders in general he has this to say: "There is a simple glad-to-have-you-here about Maryland that can't fail to warm the visitor." And about this life story of Governor Ritchie running in this popular newspaper we have this to say—Maryland's perrennial executive could have found no better way to invade the territory of his Democratic Nomination opponents if he had subsided every advertising agency in this land of ours. There's no question but that New Yorkers are becoming Ritchie-conscious. Smith and Jimmie Walker aren't on political speaking terms with Governor Roosevelt because of the recent way in which he handled the New York City mayoralty investigation, and it is said that Smith is both friendly and politically indebted to Ritchie. Taking things as they are it looks as though there should be some fun.

Sometime ago H. L. Menken, writing in the American Mercury, derided the Eastern Shore for its lethargy, medievalism, its submission to the addicts of the blue-law craze and sundry other things. Though Mr. Menken has toned his thoughts and ideas to a considerable extent since his matrimonial voyage began I think he should pause for a moment and render fresh utterances upon the more or less successful liberation of one part of the Shore from the shackles of medievalism. At least I consider it liberation when the home-town commissioners have the courage, in the face of powerful opposition, to bat out a decision permitting the local pee-wee magnets to keep their courses running on the Sabbath.

Someone said (It couldn't have been Joe Wheatley or Doc Sterling as they have their eyes glued to the ticker-tape) that anything worthwhile is mighty hard to accomplish or get. If you believe in this rule, fair citizens of Chestertown, rest assured that your community is one of the most worthwhile morsels extant. For every time I plan to visit the old homestead it requires more concentration in higher mathematics than the laying out of an itinerary to the Soviet Union. Still poor and motorless I must resort to the Pennsylvania Railroad and the generosity of friends, hence planning months in advance to make both ends meet. Really, the accessibility of Chestertown from the outside world is a problem worthy of the Chamber of Commerce...or are they functioning successfully in their efforts to keep foreigners at a respectful and uncontaminable distance?

A BILLION DEFICIT

When it comes to doing things in a realy big way, we beat the world. When depression set in all over the world and the treasuries of the civilized world found it hard to meet their obligations and were forced to show a deficit, we showed them how to have a deficit that is a deficit. With somewhat of complacency at the pikers of the rest of the world, we face a deficit of a billion or more. That's a lot of money to dig down in the national jeans for, but we'll manage it when times are better. Until then we can point with pride at our deficit, which is the biggest in the world, and exclaim, to paraphrase an automobile advertisement, "When bigger deficits are made Uncle Sam will make them."
