THE LENTEN SEASON

Did you ever regard it in this light? The measure of our power is our depth of spiritual concentration. Nothing takes root in soil constantly turned over. Nothing finds rest in a life with no quiet depths. Like the Master, we must find a "Wilderness," where, for awhile, we can hush life's clamorous voices and quietly wait for God to speak. That is what prayer means; that is what public worship provides. The shallow Christian may make both the occasional substitute for steady and persistent spiritual effort. The serious Christian bears in both Christ's constant reminder; "Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile."

Be at church Sunday.

The constant rush — the "busyness" of our modern mode of living has a tendency to prevent silent helpful meditation. Pause awhile—enjoy the quiet and peace of a reverent service—come to one of our churches tomorrow.

THE BAY BRIDGE

The State of Maryland can build the proposed Chesapeake bay bridge from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 cheaper that a private corporation, but no action has been taken.

These facts, along with information that purchase of the Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry Company by the State was considered in its plans for construction of the span, was learned following a secret meeting of the joint legislative committee appointed to study the bridge on Thursday.

The joint legislative committee will be given the task of considering all proposals in regard to the bridge construction.

These consisted of the original proposal by the private company, the report of Governor Ritchie's Bay Bridge Commission and private data which will be gathered in the course of its hearings.

The estimated cost of the span, constructed by the Bridge Company was $10,500,000, it was testified before the legislative body. Other information placed before that committee was that the State could do the work for $8,500,000, on the basis of surveys made by the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Company.

The Washington College debating team won the contest Monday night against Western Maryland College. The contest took place in William Smith Hall before a fair audience.

WHAT ARE ITS LESSONS?

The shocking death list of colored folks in Chestertown has attracted the attention of the country to the occurrence. The Baltimore Sun says. "It emphasizes the need of safeguarding the public from the deadly effects of this poisonous substance and the Government should take whatever steps are necessary to do so."

The Wilmington Every Evening says, "The living ought to take warning from the Chestertown episode. The whole affair is to be regretted, but if it shall awaken those who imbibe in strong drink to the dangers they face by recklessness and disregard of the law bearing on such matters, they will not have died in vain.

As liquor is contraband, there is no assurance regarding most of that which is offered for sale. Sometimes what is offered as smuggled liquor—of the best—is a "home made" mixture of doubtful contents and very dangerous possibilities. It is strange that persons will be so foolish as to drink anything they know nothing about.

It is such tragedies which prove beyond question that the abolition of the liquor traffic is imperative. Sobriety appears as an economic necessity, not so much the money wasted on it but the waste of productive power caused by drink and of even the loss of lives. The error in days past has been the attempt to regulate what time has shown could not be regulated. It is just such a law as the 18th Amendment which enables one to give and enjoy the full use of his faculties in real personal liberty (not license.) Our industrial age makes the abolition of the liquor traffic imperative. Sobriety appears as an economic necessity and as a safeguard against those who have no control over their appetites. Drunkenness is not a thing of today nor of yesterday but a tendency transmited from antiquity. It will take many years to correct the evil. Liquor legislation in the United States begun in 1630 and bootlegging in 1654. Take courage, citizens, and keep up the effort to free mankind of this great curse.

Pictures at Lyceum have been extra good lately.

Kent county's ex-service men will have access to loans aggregating several hundred thousand dollars under the new bonus loan bill which has passed Congress. It now awaits President Hoover's approval. He will likely veto same and it will be passed over his veto.
