THE SOUTHERN ARMY.

[Dedicated to Mrs. Jefferson Davis.]

They marched out in the morning with the battle flags unfurled,
Their brave hearts gayly singing, "We can conquer all the world;"
In their souls the love of freedom like a flawless gem impearled.

They marched out in the morning to the beating of the drum,
The glory for the many and the certain death for some;
Right was calling—and they answered, "We are coming—we have come."

They marched out in the morning with a quick and martial tread;
They never once looked backward, for their farewell word was said—
That first battle was not bloodless, for the women's hearts all bled.

They marched out in the morning in the sunlight and the dew,
The eager drums were calling and the mighty bugles blew;
They met death's bloody river—and too many waded through.

They rushed into the battle, in that mass of hissing hell;
Oh, these laughing Southern soldiers, how they fought and how they fell!
All their glory, all their story, let the voice of history tell.

When they came back in the evening from the hurry and the heat,
They came back gravely, slowly, through the silence of defeat;
Broken hearts and broken weapons at a weeping country's feet.

They came back in the evening, for the fighting was all done;
They bowed their beaten banners to the sadly sinking son;
They came back in the evening—patriots, heroes, every one.

Folded flag and silent bugle of the men that marched away,
We are here, the sons and daughters of the veterans in gray;
It is evening in the silence, let us kneel and let us pray!

NOT KENTUCKY OYSTERS.

The gentleman from Indiana smiled an unbleaving smile.

"This story of a lot of oysters being drownded off the Virginia coast by fresh-water floods sounds fishy to me."

The gentleman from Kentucky shook his head. "An oyster is not a fish, suh, if you will allow the correction, he said; "but there is nothing surprising in the statement. The foolish oysters, suh, probably endeavored to drink the water, suh!"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

THE MAN WHO DID.

All doctors in my town failed to releive me of rheumatism. I have used about half a bottle of Nelaton and feel so much improved, that while I may not need it, I enclose P. O. order for $1 for one more bottle of the remedy that has been such a God-send to me. I cheerfully recommend Nelaton to anyone suffering with rheumatism.
